SATURDAY NIGHT THOUGHTS.

It is safe to guess on at least one new war problem a week, for the U. S. to tackle. This week an American vessel, the Nebraskan, was hit by something, or run into a mine, and was damaged some; but fortunately no one was injured, and the steamer was not destroyed. How it was done the captain of the boat does not know. It is a mystery, and perhaps that is a good thing. The circumstances indicate that it was a mine. Other explosions that have been occurring strongly suggest that the Germans are again at work with their submarines, and are pretty good shots with them, rarely stopping with just crippling a boat, generally destroying.

A week has passed since an answer was due from Germany to the note of the United States in reference to the sinking of the Lusitania. What this signifies is speculation. The writer's guess is that the answer will be very courteous, with expressions of friendship to the U. S., but insisting on the right to use the submarines on all the vessels of the allies, regardless of their character or what they carry, but never intentionally on vessels flying the colors of the U. S. It should be of such a character as not to call for this country entering the conflict.

Closing school day exercises are now on us, an interesting feature of school life, and something older people always enjoy. The public as a mass is loyal to the public schools in all their departments, appreciating the great part these schools play in the world. A majority of people never go beyond the high school. In fact a majority do not pass the eighth grade, they do not pass the eighth grade, hence their closeness to all of us.

The work of amateurs is always entertaining, because we can appreciate the mistakes as well as the successes. Older people who have been through the stage era never forget their own experiences.

In Europe the dominant idea is to see how much damage you can do some one. The rule of life ought to be to show how much good you can do your fellow man; love ought to rule, not hate; brotherhood should be the idea, not enmity.

At the bottom of most of the trouble of the world is selfishness and greed, a short vision, never looking beyond one's own nose.

Some one suggests that Oregon will have to set some of her hills to erupting in order to be on a level with California. No, thank you.

There is good fiction and bad fiction. Some refreshes, some poisons. Young people may well take advice from older people.
