WHAT NEW YORK PAPERS SAID ABOUT THIS WONDERFUL ALLEGORICAL PLAY

NUDE TRUTH IN "HYPO-
CRITES" IS NEW YORK
THRILL

Cloaked only in art, a woman stepped on the stage—no, the screen, of the Longacre Theatre last night in a fashion that will set all Broadway talking. As "Truth" in "The Hypocrites," she was a figure of beauty in an allegory. The clever producers, the Bosworths, with Lois Weber, one of the most artistic of American photoplay originators, as director, have really added another mystical cloaking for the near classic form of Miss Edwards. The most of her scenes she passes as an illusionary figure, only partially defined. This is accomplished by double exposure, fully half of the play employing this troublesome method. Lois Weber has overcome all of this difficulty and has achieved a perfection of artistic results that has not been surpassed. Her picture in blue tint of broad sun-blazed river alive with silver ripples, and seen from the heights of a towering, pine-clad bank, has not been surpassed by either salon painters or photo producers.

It was a notable assemblage of film folk and film personages on Wednesday evening at the Longacre Theatre when William Sherry presented for the first time the Bosworth Inc. production "Hypocrite." To say that the film "went over" would be putting it mildly. As a production it not only pleased, but it made them all think, and talk seriously. The presentation was perfect in almost every respect. As I have told you before, this is surely one of the greatest scenarios ever written from the viewpoint of daring originality and forcefulness. The daring introduction of a beautiful naked girl through many of the scenes, typifying "Truth" in an allegorical working out of the thoughts of a minister following his strong sermon, has been done most artistically. And the points are made and made with broad, clean decisive sweeps. They are the truth and cannot be denied and they hit home. The photography and camera work is most remarkable, since a tremendous amount of multiple exposure work was necessary, and technically this is very, very difficult. The run of this film at Longacre should be a long one. It will surely thrill Broadway.

Albany Man Approves of Play; Story of the Action Given.

"Hypocrites," Lois Weber's allegorical play, opened here at the Rolfe Theatre, and will give Albany people an opportunity to witness this much discussed production until tomorrow night. The fact that the character of "Truth" is portrayed by the beautiful Miss Margaret Edwards in nude, has caused no end of discussion as to the propriety of presenting such a character on the stage or screen. The majority of people, however, uphold "Hypocrites" from an artistic standpoint and from the lessons it teaches.

A Portland minister states that "Truth" cannot be veiled, and the play is presented in the only way possible.

Dr. Wallace Howe Lee, of Albany College, witnessed the production in Portland and states that he sees no reason why "Hypocrites" should not be shown, and that it is a beautiful allegorical play.

However, the play is on and Albany people will be able to judge for themselves. The story of "Hypocrites" is herewith given:

Gabriel, an ascetic monk of olden time, labors to perfect an image of Truth, consecrating himself with fasting and prayer, and keeping his work a secret. One monk, bolder than the rest, spies upon him, but is blinded by the light of Truth and can see nothing.

The unveiling of the statue is made Fete Day, and all gather to listen to the address of the Abbot, who himself consents to unveil Gabriel's gift. The covering is pulled aside, and there stands the figure of Truth, naked. Unable to see with the eyes of the spirit, the people, with one accord, rush upon Gabriel, and kill him. Only two can look upon truth unflinchingly, a little child, and the woman who loves Gabriel. A Magdalene looks upon the statue and falls prostrate, weeping bitterly. The woman who loves him covers the dead Gabriel with her veil, which turns from white to black as she bends over him. Nearby the Magdalene crouches.

This forms the prologue of the story, which, told in a reverent and deeply religious vein, makes an indelible impression, and prepares the spectator for the modern scenes which are the main theme.

We see Gabriel as the minister of a present day church, frail and ill, but fired with divine inspiration. In the congregation are the same people who, in the prologue, stoned the monk to death. Now they are bored or shocked by his denunciation of hypocrisy. Only the woman who loved him, now a singer in his choir, and the Magdalene, who kneels in prayer after the others have left, understand. The singing monk is now a choir-boy, surreptitiously reading a newspaper.

Left alone after service the minister finds the newspaper, with its reproduction of Ferguson's famous painting, "The Truth," and vague memories stir. He sinks into a dream. His body in the form of Gabriel, the ascetic, leaves his present-day body, and accompanied by Truth with her mirror, visits the various scenes of the story, showing him in this wondrous mirror of hers the real actions of the characters.

The point is conceded and as the play really is a beautifully illustrated lesson in straight living there may be force in it.

Miss Weber has affected a new revelation of the artistic possibilities of the photo play and that, and her courage, must both meet commendation.

CITY NEWS

Olive Jackson Stephens—
Mrs. Ollie Jackson Stephens, of Portland, has been in the city on a visit here and also in the country, with her brother Henry Jackson. Mrs. Stephens recently retired as grand secretary of the Degree of Honor after serving the lodge faithfully for ten or fifteen years.

At Rest—
A prettier display of flowers is not often seen than those at the funeral of O. P. Daunals Sunday, many lovely pieces being offered. After the ritualistic services at the temple, in the presence of a large gathering of friends, with a thoughtful sermon by Dr. Geselbracht, the remains were laid to rest at the west end of the city cemetery in a pretty place.

Fast Freight Time—
A car of sugar left San Francisco Sunday morning at 11 o'clock on the Great Northern steamship company's steamer Northern Pacific, arrived in Astoria the next day and was transferred to a freight car and arrived in Albany at 7 o'clock this morning, over the Oregon Electric railroad, making the trip in 44 hours. This is pretty fast time for freight between San Francisco and Albany and establishes a new record in getting freight over the country. H. S. Logan, local freight agent for the Oregon Electric is highly elated over the feat.

Congressman Hawley Here—
Congressman Hawley will be in the city this evening and attend the union banquet at the Hotel Albany by special invitation. He is looking after his Linn county farm and visiting at the Geisendorfer farm.

Met in the Country—
Several auto loads of Albany women went down to Conser this afternoon to attend the annual outdoor gathering of the Tuesday club, meeting this afternoon with Mrs. Cook, a member. Mrs. Carrie B. Adams and a few others went down by the Electric.

All Invited—
Albany people generally are invited to the concert of Mrs. Flo, at the Presbyterian church tonight. It is not an invitation affair, but open to all.
