NICHOLLS, A PLATFORM ORATOR WILL BE HERE

Every man and woman enjoys getting under the spell of a true orator, and orators of the kind we mean are rare. But a lecture is something one can feel but cannot express, for if the hearer could tell it in the way the lecturer can there would no longer be need of his magnetic inspiring personality behind it and he would not be considered great.

Roland A. Nicholls, whose greatest fame has been made with his lecture, "The Man Worth While," has every quality needed by a great orator. Once you hear him you will probably agree with others that he is the peer of any lecturer you ever heard. He has never lectured on the western coast before and it was only by engaging him two years ago that it was possible to secure him for this season. Simply be on hand when he comes to town. He's great.
