Complimenting Miss Elizabeth Edwards, who is a charming visitor from Palo Alto California, Miss Isabelle Young entertained at a pretty dancing and lawn party on Thursday. The yard was transformed into a Japanese garden, with lanterns and cozy corners. The rooms and porch were attractively decorated for the occasion with baskets of pink rambler roses, and the shaded lights made a subdued light for the merry dancers. A two-piece orchestra furnished excellent music during the evening. A dainty repast was served at a late hour, at small tables in the library and on the porch. The additional guests present were Misses Marion Anderson, Nellie Snyder, Hazel Rader (Medford), Lora and Gertrude Taylor, Mae Tillman, Blanche Hammel, Anna Dawson, Gretta Fortmiller, Julia Crowell, Wright (St. Louis, Missouri), Mae Ballack, Dr. Cook, Messrs. There is a colony of about one hundred and fifty people living in attractive house boats on the Willamette river. These floating homes are very cozy and pretty, have every modern convenience and are made to look very attractive with boxes of flowers, vines, awnings, swings and porch chairs around. One can easily imagine herself at a summer resort for every day, there is sailing and canoeing and on Saturday afternoons there are boat races. Many launches and row boats are in evidence also. Larger steamers from Oregon City pass the club each day to the Oakes Amusement Park, which is near the yacht club and only a twelve minutes ride outside of Portland.

OREGON CERTAINLY WON A GREAT VICTORY

Eyes of Whole Country Opened
By Wonderful Showing of This State.

Oregonians hardly appreciate what the recent victory at the Exposition in winning a large number of medals will mean to this state. The following from the Oregon building speaks for the victory:

Grand prize for the "best, most complete, and most attractive" exhibit in horticulture, together with a score of gold and silver medals for individual exhibits in horticulture; grand prize for the "best general display of forage products," including all unthreshed grain, together with three medals of honor, twenty-four gold medals, sixty-nine silver medals and eighty-nine bronze medals for various products of the soil! How is that for one week's awards for Oregon? From the noise being made by the six or eight states in direct competition, the Oregon winning ought to be satisfactory to Oregonians. Oregon fruit is now officially recognized as the best and Oregon forage products will become as favorably known as the Oregon rose.

In the horticultural awards, the Willamette valley was given a gold medal on Italian prunes. However, long before the jury announced its decision the public had decided that the Willamette prune was incomparably superior to any other to be tasted on the grounds.

When it came to pressed fruits, the splendid display from the Rogue River Valley—Medford, Ashland and Grants Pass—captured the gold medal and the admiration of every visitor to the exhibit. Douglas, and Wasco counties and the Willamette valley were each given a silver medal for their fine displays of bottled fruits.

Oregonians on the exposition grounds are particularly pleased that the state captured the grand prize on forage crops. While Oregonians know that general farming represents the larger portion of the wealth of the state, and that the state is unexcelled in the production of superior forage and grains, the apple and pear booster, more active than the rest, has made Oregon known most largely as the premier horticultural state. The magnificent showing in the palace of horticulture has made a tremendous impression and in winning the grand prize has brought Oregon's larger side to the attention of the nation, which will now know that Oregon can raise hogs, feed dairy animals and beat the world in other things than fruit. This is particularly gratifying to O. E. Freytag, of Oregon City, who is director of agricultural exhibits.

"Bill" Hanley, Oregon's biggest rancher, who operates one little concern of over 200,000 acres in Harney county, was here a day or so ago and said the exposition has finally placed Oregon where she ought to be among the farming states and he is as delighted with her success as any proud father could be of an only son.

It is worthy of note that the medals of honor, which are one degree above gold medals, went to the Eastern Oregon, Willamette valley and southern Oregon exhibits with equal honors.

CHINESE GIRL IN DENVER AT HEAD OF CLASS

Remarkable Case of Mongolian
Assimilating Our American Ideas.

Denver, Col., June 24.—Manual Training High School here has a Chinese girl whom Principal Charles A. Bradley described as "the most remarkable case of a person of alien parentage assimilating American ideas."

Mary Hung, an almond-eyed oriental, has taken the highest honors given at the Manual Training high school. At seventeen the daughter of a former "king of Chinatown," she is valedictorian of her class. She is one of the most popular girls in the school, if not the most popular. Principal Bradley said: "She is thoroughly imbued with the spirit of the American girl. She even makes American jokes and is a fluent, though moderate, user of American slang."

She is not a grind. She "adores" football and at a recent rally made the best speech of any one on the program, teacher pot excepted. She "just loves" to dance the latest American dances. She wears American clothes of the latest fashion as if to the manner born. In short, she's ultra American in everything but her parentage. She was born in Greeley, Colo., and has always gone to public schools.

"The children used to call me 'chink,'" and I'd run home crying to my father," said Mary. "But he'd say: 'Never mind; just study your lessons. School is the place for you to get a good education.' My father has very different ideas about the education of his daughters than the most Chinamen. It had been like that, I'd have been married off long ago. 'I'm almost an old maid now, and when I'm twenty I'll be a hopeless old maid, according to Chinese ideas.'"

Mary Hung says she is going to Wellesley and afterward study medicine. Eventually her ambition is to go to China and be a doctor in the government service.

London, June 24.—The British admiralty announced last night that the cruiser Goxburg was torpedoed but the damage is not serious, with no casualties. It is believed the German statement refers to the Goxburg, which resembles the Minotaur.
