SATURDAY NIGHT THOUGHTS

This week Germany's second reply was completed and handed to the American minister in Berlin. It is known something about what it is, and yet considerable of it has been speculation. According to reports it is not entirely satisfactory, and yet there are concessions and the spirit displayed in it is friendly. It is undoubtedly of such a character that the two countries will be for some time adjusting differences that exist in reference to the matter.

So far as the war itself goes there has been little change. On the east the Germans have gotten the advantage decidedly. On the west it is about a standoff. It is notable though, that all the fighting is off German soil, a point of big significance.

England has shown the need of more decided action by a big call for more men, men, men, men being the cry. What for, for slaughter for something without sufficient cause. A Chautauqua lecturer declared there was a big cause—Constantinople; but more territory is no cause for war these modern times. That is anti-Christian.

Growing out of the war the U. S. had a near tragedy that took the front page, an attempt by a former college professor to kill a financier. The professor thought he had been divinely called to end the awful contest, and so he began on a man who had been investing in the business of army supplies, making a botch of it as all men do who think they are called for such great things.

Albany this week has had its annual Chautauqua, an event of much local interest. Though somewhat dampened by the weather it has had the chautauqua spirit. There is much in Chautauqua to instruct and interest one, and the one here especially has been full of merit, both from a musical and a literary and moral and religious standpoint. The Chautauqua, though, is not what it used to be. It has become very common, nearly every cross roads having one, making it impossible to give it the cast a Chautauqua should have. Albany's though, is along the old-style line, not a big hall affair.

In the things of life we do well to act from an unselfish standpoint seeking to build up the things that help others, making life the easier to live, harder for others to do wrong and easier for them to do right.

MISFITS

This dispute between Germany and the U. S. is like most disputes. There will always be a little difference of opinion, and that is as natural as grass in a field.

Compromise has always been the spirit in the adjustment of great things.

Misfits melt into the bottom of his chair. A young man back east recently wore at his wedding a pair of gal-luses his grandfather wore just 70 years before.

Nels Darling told about a man back in Oklahoma City who never said anything mean about his fellow men, no matter how cussed they were, and when the man died, the stores all closed out of respect for him.

What would most people talk about if they couldn't whack somebody?

If a man is notoriously bad should he be put in the class of the man who is known to be supremely good? Is there any merit in living a clean life if it is viewed by people the same as a bad life?

If a man does a mean thing in a community he should be condemned, and if he does a good thing, he should be commended.

But don't gossip. There is altogether too much talk on guess work, too much juggling with character over rumors.

Character is too valuable an asset in the lives of people to be fooled with; but when we use apples we have to cut the rot out, if there is any.

With lives full of faults, at the best, few people are in a position to throw stones.

While no one is authorized to be a judge, all men are witnesses.

To the Business
Men of Albany

When a run-down salesman calls on you, do you buy his goods? Aren't you afraid of his line because he looks as if no one ever gave him an order?

Same thing is true of a seedy town. To be prosperous we must look prosperous and show local pride.

Clean streets, nice stores and well-painted buildings pay because they bring business. Paint-hungry buildings are least excusable, for paint made of
