SAN DIEGO FAIR HAS DRAWN GOOD CROWDS

Nearly a Million Altogether Have Visited the Beautiful Grounds. San Diego, July 13.—June contributed the third largest monthly attendance at the San Diego exposition since its opening in January, while July, even at this date gives promise of breaking all records. During June the attendance reached the total of 166,135, a daily average of 5,537. This figure was reached without any special events or celebrations of importance, plainly indicating that the San Diego Exposition is drawing heavy patronage by reason of its beauty and the extent of its exhibits. The only special event which swelled the crowd was the concert which Mme. Schumann-Heink gave when she sang to 20,000 people. The attendance at the exposition since its opening is now close to the million mark and when this figure is reached there will be a general celebration in which all of San Diego and its contiguous territory will engage. The occasion will be known as "Million Attendance Day." July will undoubtedly contribute large crowds each day. The eastern travel is well on its way and trains are arriving daily with large crowds. The three-day celebration of July 4 just concluded poured thousands through the exposition gates and in the absence of official figures the attendance for the three days is estimated by exposition directors to have been more than 75,000. A number of delegations coming to San Diego for conventions during July will boost the exposition attendance. Chief of these will be the Loyal Order of Moose convention which is expected to be attended by 40,000 visitors.
