SATURDAY NIGHT THOUGHTS.

The big murderfest over the ocean this week saw the end of the biggest fight in the history of the world, so experts declare. It resulted in the fall of Warsaw, made famous years ago by being captured by Napoleon.

As one reviews the war of the year, what a long list of disappointments loom up, false prophecies and blasted hopes. It goes to show that you can not tell about things before hand any more than you can see through a stone wall.

A city back East met with disaster this week so quick it was an astonishment. A cloudburst caused the death of many lives and great damage to property. It was more sudden even than the war in Europe. Such things emphasize the uncertainty of the things of life.

Just as sudden was a hailstorm up in Montana that laid low the earnings of many for a year and blasted their business prospects for some time. In such things, though, there can be only one good rule: Never cry over spilt milk. If you fail, get up and go at it again. It sometimes takes an indomitable will to weather the financial storms, as well as nature's storms, in this old world of ours.

A national osteopathic convention was held in Portland this week, one of interest, bringing out many facts the public is watching closely along all health lines. Osteopathy has come to stay and grow, having elements that mean development and success. Eventually allopathy and osteopathy will be combining the best features of both, some for one thing, some for another. As yet man doesn't know himself completely, and there is as big a vision in health remedies as ever. The future undoubtedly has marvels in store.

An alliance that commends itself is the Pan-American, in which the countries along the North and South American coast will work together for mutual protection and benefit. Altogether it will make a strong combination. The South American nations have been advancing materially for several years and are now much further advanced along all lines.

Young people should learn to weigh their actions before stepping forward. Too many of them heedlessly do things that may charge the whole tenor of their lives, resulting in ruin, and many of them do so, too easily influenced. It is a big thing to have the stamina to say no to evil and to leap away from temptation. In the battle of life character is a great asset, and should never be lost sight of for a little temporary gain.

MISFITS

Charlie Berry says the coon is the most inquisitive animal in the world. He has two who are interested in everything around his home.

Electric storms are becoming unpopular in the middle east.

The present lamented European war has been full of the greatest battles in the history of the world, enough superlatives to sink the continent.

The president of France speaks of the grandeur of the role of the French army. Wouldn't honor fit better than grandeur?

Europe is getting her taste back and wants 100,000 boxes of apples. We have 'em. The best in the w.

Remember, Mr. Kaiser, how Napoleon got bottled up in the snow when he went too far beyond Warsaw.

Billy Sunday is to be congratulated. Dr. Aked, once Rockefeller's pastor, objects to him.

Now they have expanded it into three rings for wedding ceremony. Why not make it ten and finish the agony?

After all July was some dry compared with Iowa, which had ten inches of rain.

The average business has to be pushed it stagnates.
