"DAMN MOLLYCODDLES."

An Eastern paper has the following article on mollycoddles:

The papers report Theodore Roosevelt as saying, "Damn the mollycoddles!"—meaning men and women who favor peace among civilized people.

This elegant expression indicates the intellect, the refinement and humanity of Theodore Roosevelt. Followers of Roosevelt should be very proud of the rare brilliancy, profound wisdom and beautiful philosophy of life contained in the expression, "Damn the mollycoddles!" This expression points to the precise place where Roosevelt belongs. An African jungle would make him a far better habitation than a civilized city.

The ages of effort which the race has spent in climbing from savagery to civilization are utterly wasted on Theodore Roosevelt. This aristocratic person is animated by the savage spirit of the ancient cave man. In his raw and vulgar brutishness he is the uncouth and hideous contradiction of everything civilized and human and good that the race has attained in its long and dearly purchased progress. The "mollycoddles" who this blood-thirsty jungle beast vulgarly "damns" are men and women who have emerged from the baleful black chaos of barbarism's night and entered into the sunlit spaces of civilization's day. They are men and women who have outgrown the ferocious nature of the cave man and acquired some of the milder attributes and more enlightened characteristics of civilized man. They are men and women who have progressed and who have benefitted somewhat from the science, culture, arts, ethics and refinements of human society.

The "mollycoddles" would rather see men working together fraternally in peace than fighting each other savagely in war. They would rather see bread produced to feed the people than guns made to shoot the people. They would rather have men guided by love and reason than have them flung reason to the winds of folly and destroy each other and each others' works in a spurious passion of hate.

The "mollycoddles" would have all men and women, bound by the felicitous ties of human fellowship, unite to peacefully create a better system of society out of the present "sorry scheme of things," to make life sweeter and fuller of happy meaning on this bountiful old earth, and to clearly direct the progress of the race along the most favorable paths of the future.

MISFITS

Christianity stands for a war against sin; not a blood spilling war of brother against brother. That is barbarism.

Big armies and navies are a part of the infamous business of war.

Are you a partner of Mars?

It takes money to run the little jits.

War is bad enough without a strike on top of it.

Don't jump at conclusions. Give the facts a chance to show their hand.

Of all fool things in the world the worst is that of members of a family fighting each other. They should work together, overlooking each other's faults, bearing and forbearing.

Europe is made up of a big family, and the great war is one of brother against brother, cousin against cousin. Instead of fighting they should be laboring together for a better civilization, for love instead of hatred.

Great is fame. Down in Oakland, Calif., the home town of Charlie Chaplin, when he appears on the streets crowds follow him as if he were a prize fighter.

The man who can make the world laugh is entitled to an audience anywhere.

It is a great thing to laugh much, a fine thing to even smile, and the more of it the better, with a place left to spile in a serious countenance when occasion demands.

Better late than never, applies to marriage also.
