

Newest Millinery in Exclusive Models

The showing of clever new hats is particularly good now. The season's best styles are here in good assortments. Small hats are very popular, and large shapes are fast coming in at this time.

Many of our hats are created in our own workrooms, and are exclusive, one-of-a-kind designs.

We are constantly receiving, direct from New York, positively the newest vogue exclusive hats, and from Chicago the popular Pick hats. These hats are too well known to need descriptions.

Visit the millinery department, on second floor, at once. You will enjoy the exhibit of new hats.

GOOD ROADS DAY AT THE FAIR SEPT. 28.

Two Thousand Autos Expected
on the Grounds That Day
With Roads Boosters.

Julius L. Meier, of Portland, will be chairman of the day at the Oregon State Fair Tuesday, Sept. 28, on the occasion of Good Roads Day. He has made out a program that will assemble expert roadmakers, paving contractors, dealers in automobiles, county commissioners, county judges, agents for road building machines and earnest workers for the betterment of all public highways. Two thousand automobiles are expected on the fair grounds that day and the occupant of every car will be a talking advertisement in behalf of bettering the condition of all roads. Mr. Meier is sending personal letters to personal friends to attend on that day and aid in making the day a memorable one in Marion county history. The Southern Pacific will run a good roads special from all points in Oregon. John M. Scott, general passenger agent of the lines in Oregon, has given the day special recognition and will call attention to Good Roads Day in literature to be sent out later as well as in advertising placed in the newspapers of the Willamette valley section.

LINN HAS BEST EXHIBIT AT OREGON BUILDING

F. M. Sherman's Ideal Garden
Ranch Attracts Most Attention of Anything There.

San Francisco, Sept. 19.—One of the really interesting and effective exhibits offered by the state of Oregon is that ten-acre showing of F. M. Sherman, of Lebanon, just now rebuilt with fresh products. This is located in the Palace of Agriculture, occupying 25x50 feet, and is inspected by hundreds of visitors each week. This exhibit shows 80 varieties of potatoes, 38 of wheat, 23 of barley, 36 of oats, 5 kinds of clover, and all kinds of grasses, plus the bamboo. There are dried and canned fruits, fresh and canned vegetables, several varieties of corn, as well as innumerable varieties of seeds, also China pheasants. There are many pictures showing the products growing on this Lebanon farm, and topping the exhibit is a fine specimen of the Barred Rock hen, by which Mr. Sherman swears. New products just placed show oats almost eight feet tall, and vetch with a 25 foot spread, common vetch eight feet in length. Sudan grass, 72 days from seed, measures 6½ feet, and the exhibitor says that neighboring farmers, Clem Brothers, are showing Sudan grass measuring nine feet in height. He believes this grass, introduced into the United States from Egypt about four years ago, is going to prove a very superior hay grass for the Willamette Valley. Besides all of this, the exhibit shows many varieties of more or less important products and the statement is that "Ideal Gardens Ranch," the somewhat ambitious name Mr. Sherman's Willamette valley farm, will grow this year more than 500 varieties of all kinds of produce. It is not intended to convey the idea that these 500 varieties are grown by him for commercial purpose or that Mr. Sherman specializes in any considerable number of them. Neither is it the purpose of the exhibits to induce anyone to take up farming on a ten-acre tract in Willamette valley or anywhere else. Mr. Sherman specializes in strawberries, canteloupes and year-round-garden products, with a few chicken and minor side lines thrown in for good measure, and while the Lebanon man has done almost phenomenally well on ten acres (or 8 acres until a year ago last February, when he added two more at $325 an acre), he happens to be a happy combination of business man and farmer. He is a man of method, of abounding energy, faith in himself, and a determination that is apparent in every move. And he has a wife who has always had flowers on the table—perhaps his greatest asset. Others who lack any part of the combination that has entered into the success of Mr. Sherman might well hesitate about confining themselves to ten acres, even in the Willamette valley. The exhibit, however, together with Mr. Sherman's story, tells what one man has done for himself, shows the prolific production of countless varieties of products that will grow on Willamette Valley soil (of which that at Lebanon is typical), and offers to others the encouragement there should be in the splendid performance of a man of ordinary intelligence, dead broke ten years ago, a stranger in a strange land and in ill health—a man now risen to comparative affluence, restored to health and to social position happy in the possession of independence and a bright outlook for the future.

VILLA PROTRAYED IN PLAY AT ROLFE THEATRE

In that startling and thrilling four-reel Mutual Masterpicture, "The Outlaw's Revenge in the Dawn of a New Republic," R. A. Walsh in his interpretation of the part of the outlaw, General Francisco Villa, has made a bid for a higher position in the world of film portrayal than he has aspired to previously. This portrait is a masterpiece deserving of its permanent place in a Masterpicture. It is as if Mr. Walsh carefully studied all the original's surface characteristics, made up to represent them and then suddenly informed his whole creation with the vivid action for which he is justly celebrated as an actor. "The Outlaw's Revenge" will be shown at the Rolfe tomorrow.

TRICK PHOTOGRAPHY IN "A LITTLE BROTHER OF THE RICH"

Roaring along at sixty miles an hour, a powerful engine of the mogul type strikes an automobile containing Muriel Evers (Maude George), the faithless wife who has ruined a score of lives in her basely selfish career, and instantly "kills" her.

"A Little Brother of the Rich," the Universal's five-act film version of Joseph Medill Patterson's celebrated novel and play, contains many thrilling scenes, but none which equal the one in which an engine runs down an automobile and smashes it into junk.

With the car going at terrific speed, Griffith drove close to the railroad train and then swerved the machine to one side so it would receive the full force of the engine's impact. There was no need for Miss George's anxiety, but she had not been initiated into a bit of trick photography which was to follow, and her fear was only natural. Just as the engine bore down on the auto, Griffith—but why reveal to rival directors a secret which the Universal values so highly? Suffice it to say that Griffith executed just as neat a trick in photography as has ever been "pulled" by any director.

This thrilling scene will be shown at the Hub theatre tomorrow.
