Talked the Bill to Death.

One of the most dramatic holdups in congress was made in 1901 by Senator Thomas H. Carter of Montana, who talked to death a $10,000,000 rivers and harbors bill chiefly because the house had refused to appropriate money to irrigate the dry lands of the west.

"I shall do what lies in my power to prevent this bill from passing," the senator shouted. "It will not pass if my strength does not fail to such an extent that I can no longer occupy this floor, and I am in a pretty fair state of health."

To the laughter of the senate and the galleries Carter then described the clam flats and the mud banks of unheard of places for which large propositions had been made in the present bill. He discussed the draft and tonnage of the screws and the lobster pots.
He lasted for more than thirteen hours.
When he was through the congress was dead, the senator's own term was ended, and it was time to inaugurate Vice President Roosevelt.—New York Herald.

Boxing With the Feet.

The form of boxing known as "la savate," in which the feet are used as well as the fists and kicks are as legiti-mate as blows, has for a long time been a popular exercise in French gymnasia and schools of arms. The first principle is that the whole weight of the body shall be placed on one leg and that the farthest from the adversary. The disengaged leg is used as an adjunct to the fists and flies out with astonishing swiftness and accuracy of aim. The "coup de savate" proper is the "chasse" off the right foot or "shin hit," a dangerous blow, but one that is easily avoided by raising the left knee to the level of the waist.
Formidable as this method of assault and others, such as the "coup d'arret," or straight stop hit, and the "coup de figure," or swinging face kick, may be and undoubtedly are with an expert, the parries and guards are simple and sure if properly used.—Washington Star.
