SATURDAY NIGHT THOUGHTS.

Some old war, and it is certainly getting aged when we remember the predictions at the beginning of the tragedy. This week the balance looks slightly in favor of the allies. One feature was a gain by the British. This has been so rare during the contest it is specially mentioned. Usually it has been reported as the French. Perhaps the British will show some of their old-time gumption—not referring to our revolution. They are fighters all right when they get into a thing right.

One feature of modern warfare is that of Zeppelins and aeroplanes dropping bombs on non-combatants. It is one that does not appeal to the average person. Nevertheless the air armaments are in the business to stir, and to play an important part. The great need is for more humanity in the direction the bombs are sent.

A pleasing thing of the week is the comparative lull down Mexico way, where things have been quiet enough for jinglots to climb into their shells for a rest. Perhaps out of the chaos there will come order. With the whole of the western hemisphere united this may happen.

No war on this way; but we have an occasional tragedy. One occurred at St. Helena this week in which three people were slain. It was a useless affair. It is always dangerous for divorced people to be allowed alone in a case like this one. The marshal should have known whether the husband was armed. The revolver always means trouble when at hand. The less of them around the better.

Albany this week had a couple of notable events. It's dollar day was one of the biggest business successes in the history of the city. It took like waffles on a cold day. Everybody was here for a bargain. The other was Albany's first industrial exposition, another immense success. The display was so creditable to create universally favorable comment. It will undoubtedly prove a fine thing for the city, as many outsiders were here to enjoy and appreciate it, the universal comment being one of praise.

MISFITS

A man never gets so big but what some woman can make him feel small.

A young woman upon being told by her husband that he wished she could make the bread his mother used to make, remarked that she wished he could make the dough her father used to make.

There will be some Folk down at Mexico City, when Joseph gets there.

A man up on Fourth street near the Central buildings has been taking numerous baths this week for ten cents. That's enough to make the crowds rubber.

If we can't have things our way we have to make the best of them.

South Carolina may become as famous as Ga.

Some one said our ex was bigger than the state fair used to.

Visitors at Fair.

San Francisco, Oct. 14.—Among the recent visitors seen at the building were Sam Jackson, owner of the Portland Journal, Carl Abrams of the Salem Statesman, Editor Greer of the Ashland Tidings, Dr. W. J. Kerr of O. A. C., Frank J. Miller, state insurance commissioner, with Mrs. Miller, Sam Evans of the Klamath Falls Northwestern, C. H. Vauspel of Ashland, Dr. J. R. N. Bell, of Corvallis, will be here within a day or so to represent Benton county in affairs connected with the Willamette Valley booth. He will have a minister partner in the person of Dr. Dunsmore, of Independence, who has represented Polk county here since the opening of the exposition.

S. P. Prize Winners.

The Southern Pacific has announced the prize winners for excellence in loading different articles at the station along the road, as follows: Freight handlers at Sherwood took first prize on the entire Pacific system for loading potatoes, with Mt. Angel ranking second. Clackamas, Salem and Cornelius stood in the order named for worthy mention. Medford employees won second prize for loading perishable fruits and vegetables to maximum car capacity, a California station getting first prize.
