ELECTION INDICATES LITTLE

The principal feature of the few elections this week was the return of Bull Moose to the Republican ranks. The Bull Moose as a party is a dead animal, according to the indications.

GREAT WALNUT STATE.

That Oregon is destined to be a great Walnut state was brought out decidedly at the state convention.

Already, Oregon has one-fourth of all the young walnut trees in the United States. Professor Lewis said.

Walnut men have comparatively little to fear in the near future so far as marketing is concerned, said Professor Lewis.

Mr. Lewis said that the walnut in industry has passed the boom stage and that the winter of 1908 cleared out most of the worthless types.

A MODERN WOMAN.

A fool dancer back east puts diamonds on her dog. Probably the dog has more sense than she has.

JONATHAN IS AROUND.

Jonathan is making himself pretty conspicuous around town these days. Reference is had to the Jonathan apple, a fine looking piece of fruit.

STRONGEST IN U. S.

There isn't a man in the Republican party who can touch Woodrow Wilson in a campaign for president.

BIGGER DRY VOTE.

The trend of sentiment on prohibition was shown in Ohio, where the dry gain is over twenty-five thousand, mostly in the rural districts.

ART and VOICE STUDIO OPENED

First class in Oil Painting starts Saturday morning at 9 o'clock; second starts next Wednesday.

Those making application at an early date be given a special rate of $1 for 3-hour lesson.

Will also instruct a limited number in voice culture.
