OPPOSES COMPULSION.

The announcement that President Wilson will oppose compulsory militia duty, provided for in the Chamberlain bill, will be received with great favor by the people of the country generally. The war department is reported to favor the compulsory system; but this is to be expected, and is in keeping with the general policy of war departments. Call it what you will, excuse it all you will, it is the very foundation of militarism, and there should go up a protest from all over the country that shall be felt at Washington. It is against the principles of democracy, and savors only of imperialism. Such a law would be a blow to our institutions, a strike at our liberties. Thrusting twelve year old boys, or boys of any age, into military service, except as an extreme measure, is infamous. President Wilson may depend upon the support of the masses in his opposition to the measure.

THE COUNTRY INCENSED.

The people of the U. S. have a right to be angry over the massacre of sixteen American citizens by a gang of Mexican bandits, led by the notorious Villa. A more cold-blooded tragedy was never enacted. It puts the rebel general beneath consideration, and places him where he will not be entitled to consideration if captured. More than the stigma it places on Villa it condemns Carranza, who had been recognized by our government for neglect of duty. It could easily have been prevented and should have been. The case is one that calls for a strong policy on the part of the government, one that shall result in the desperadoes being brought to justice at any cost. The people of the country are thoroughly incensed and will back any effort made to secure the capture and punishment of the bloodthirsty outlaws. The case, though, calls for cool heads, and, first of all, President Carranza should be given a chance to control the matter.

NOTHING IN THE GAME.

During all the time it is probable that people will be looking for opportunities to make a good deal of money for a little expenditure. It is this spirit that is at the bottom of much of the gambling of the world. The old Lusiana lottery had devotees to the last gasp, and then the patrons would bite at a bait from Europe. From a raffle to a national lottery, people are quick to invest, hoping for even a small chance to make a big landing. That old Spanish prison bunco game must have victims or it couldn't be kept up. Some fool may attempt to play the game, with only one result as absolutely certain. And what is the harvest. Hardly anyone in the long run has anything to show for their work; but they will always have a bad conscience to disturb them, whether successful or not.

MISFITS

Such is the power of kindness that even a turtle back east has been tamed and will lean out of one's hand, and knows every member of the family.

Some human beings are that susceptible, and, in a day will forget more than a turtle.

Shakespeare said that husbands are the biggest of all fools, but, as a matter of fact a bigger fool is the one who never marries.

As hot as we are at Mexico, or rather at Mexico's bandits, we will do well to keep cool. Perhaps the Mexicans themselves will settle the matter for Uncle Sam.

The Astorian refers to the brotherly love Portland has for that city. A joke that might be framed.

How fickle is the human taste. An Astoria man wants to trade a player piano for a lot.

Albany can lay it all over the other towns again. In one of the lodges the father and son hold the two highest offices, C. N. McKey and son Miles, of the Maccabees.

The person who has any money left after the holiday season spends several weeks wondering how it happened.

A man named Munny recently got married at Spokane, and now the newspapers are jumping all over the name by telling how his wife loves Munny and therefore married him.

Misfits is a consummate failure as a weather prophet.

Pearl is the name of an undertaker at Medford. Evidently pays even in a live town.

A big thing in any business is character.

What a strange thing war is. Germany refuses visitors these days. Doesn't want them.

Whether you are willing or not, you have to listen to Theodore R., and we spend our lives just that way, taking the peppercorns and the ice cream just as they come.

Elected President—
Mrs. W. B. Gilson, a former Albany woman, this week was elected president of the Fraternal Aid, of Salem.

Some Difference—
At Albany 20 degrees above zero is considered decidedly cold. At Pendleton it has been below zero twice this month.
