SATURDAY NIGHT THOUGHTS.

We almost stand on our heads sometimes in connection with the migrations of the war over the Atlantic. It is a mixed affair, evolving a ball of immense dimensions, that is rolling down a great country, like a juggernaut crushing financially, morally and physically the people of Europe.

The difficulties of the United States have gradually come out of the clouds, and just now seem not to be of a serious character, and one can hardly see how the country can be involved, at least so long as cool heads control affairs.

In connection with it a great question is that of militarism, under whatever guise it may appear. Some of the things proposed may not in themselves be militarism, but their tendency is strong that way, and one can spell nothing else in the long run.

Level heads have kept the country out of a squabble with Mexico. Taking the proper course President Wilson insisted on the punishment of the Mexican murderers being left to President Carranza's government, and the result is the summary punishment of a good many of the bandits, prompt justice that will have a decided effect for good.

California, the land of sunshine, oranges, flowers and everything else delightful, has been having a storm, such as we know nothing about in the Willamette Valley. Here we also had some weather, a nice snap, with seven degrees above zero as the lowest, and some snow with a dry surface, and some of the finest coasting, sailing and sleighing ever had anywhere, a pleasing winter change, though something it is to be hoped is not repeated very often.

MISFITS

The Astorian, a prominent Republican paper, calls the recent change of the secretaries of the state fair a fiasco of the governor's administration, the disruption of the state fair board, in direct line with previous efforts, ending with a personal whack at the chief executive, which indicates that there is also liable to be a party rupture in Oregon.

Of course the millionaires of Seattle can have all the corn juice they wish.

A big concern that has been known to cut a $92,000,000 melon wanted four or five dollars worth of advertising free!

A Minneapolis paper gives a picture of an elephant with its trunk slightly raised showing underneath the phiz of one T. R.

Life is full of disappointments. Recently a man in Minneapolis grabbed what he supposed was $10,000 in gold coins and attempted to get away; instead it was all pennies, $25 worth.

The gum biz is said to have increased the past year. That's one thing you can't depress.

A Chicago dr. says kissing has become vulgarized. The liar!

We may have to take that back, just depends upon which side of the matter you look. Some of these movie lissies are the limit.

No Booze for Her. Irrigon, Or. Irrigator.—One of the Round girls, the bow-legged one, gave Maj. Fairplay the mitten the other night. She says he boozes too much.

A man's home is evidently his castle over in Seattle.

No pessimism here! yells the Roseburg Review clear across the corner of page three.

Let everybody else get up on their toes and shout confidence until nothing else can be heard.

That's all that's necessary to make times sprint.

In the meantime, though, money is lying dormant and carpenters and others are crying for something to do.

What's needed is actual doing of things, for which there is plenty of money.
