GUARDS RETURN TO SALEM TODAY WITHOUT CONVICT.

George Clark Still at Large and Will Probably Remain So for Quite a Spell.

The second big convict hunt to take place in the neighborhood of Albany in the past four months is over and the least of the guards sent from the state penitentiary returned to Salem this morning.

No more mysterious and sensational escape has taken place at the prison in recent years. Seeing his way out of his cell under the very eyes of the watchful guards, a process that probably took weeks, covering his work up each day with bread crumbs, and finally breaking out the two bars, and after prying the bars off of a window went out over the roof of the auditorium and let himself to the ground via a chain of blankets.

TODAY'S ODDEST STORY HAPPENED IN ALBANY, ORE.

Visitor to City Introduces New Method of Transportation of Small Babies.

Indians carry their young offspring on their backs, kangaroos use a pouch in the front of the female, cats carry theirs in their mouths and the ordinary human being these days either use a carriage, cart or lug their fond youngsters in their arms.

Driver Finney, of one of the Whitney jitneys, was called to the S. P. depot one day recently and a woman approached with a suitcase, a package and a bundle done up in canvas and carried by shawl straps with a handle.

After about 12 minutes she returned and directed the driver to an address on West Eighth street. When about half way to the place Finney said he heard a funny noise, but looking back he saw nothing unusual.

"What's that," asked Finney, as he reached back and turned the bundle over.

"That? O, that's just the music box, I guess the young man's a little restless. He's all right, though."

Finney surmised that the young man must have been alright after being turned over, for he had been standing on his head in the back of the car for nearly 15 minutes.

The same lady was seen in various stores that day and on the street, carrying the baby in a bundle by a handle.

Sheriff D. H. Bodine announces that on Feb. 3, the delinquent tax list of Linn county for the 1914 rolls will be published in papers in different parts of the county.

Many people have a misunderstanding of what this means. Taxes that became delinquent last October 1st, will be advertised. BOYS LEAVE HOME

THREE PORTLAND YOUTHS TAKEN FROM TRAIN.

Wanted to See the World but Agree That Home is Good Even With Step-fathers and Mothers.

Night officers Rodgers and Worrell last night took from train No. 13 arriving here at 11:37 p. m. three small boys, Robert Burrough, aged 12, Arthur Bullay, aged 14, and Donald Burner, aged 12. They had left Portland at 8:25, and riding on the front end of the open blind baggage they were almost frozen.

The boys are all good looking little fellows, not at all bad, but just started out to see the world. Peculiarly they are all without a father or a mother. They stated that home life was not exactly what it seemed and thought that they would hit it off for themselves.

Robert Burroughs, 12, says that his father is dead and that his mother is married again. Arthur Bullay, 14, the leader of the three, told Judge Lewelling that his mother is dead and that his father is now living with his fourth wife. Donald Burner, 12, also has a step-father and his real father is dead.

They are all three nicely dressed, innocent little fellows, probably good at home, but suddenly possessed of the wanderlust. It is certain that they are inexperienced, for even the roughest of the old timers do not ride outside of the cars these days.

Chief of Police Catlin called Chief of Police Clark on long distance this morning and the Portland officer promised to take the matter up with the juvenile court at once and an officer will no doubt be down to return the boys tonight.

All three agreed that after last night's experience that home was really the best place.
