WHO IS WHO A WORK OF IMPORTANCE AND INTEREST

Having One's Name in It An Honor Appreciated By All Men of Prominence.

Having one's name in Who Is Who is an honor all authors are glad to receive, for it means something. The work aims to give a brief, crisp, personal sketch of the notable living Americans in all parts of the world—men or women whose work or achievements make them of general interest. It gives the chief feature of each career without puffery or eulogy, praise or criticism. It is published every two years and offers information of value to every one wishing to keep abreast of the times. The fact that Rev. G. H. Young, of this city, has been asked to send data in reference to himself, because of his book published during the past two years, makes the work of special interest to Albany people.

SAGE ROOSTER BOOSTS COUNTY SEAT OF LAKE

Says Eugene Is to Have Another
Wholesale House,
Making Five in All.

Eugene, Feb. 7.—Since the Guard went into the hands of a receiver and the water board made a statement to the public, the war between the Guard and the water board seems to have been completely covered up and both sides are now discussing the capture of the British ship by the Germans and running her into an American port. The Guard and also the Eugene water board are thing seriously of employing some German engineers to show them.

Eugene is very quiet in a business way, but is keeping pace with all the other valley towns.

Several new buildings will be constructed as soon the weather will permit.

A large wholesale house and a two-story concrete building on the corner of Fifth and Pearl streets will be finished and ready for occupancy this month. It will be occupied by a Portland wholesale firm, making five large wholesale houses in Eugene.

A good crop of candidates for the various offices, is anticipated for 1916. They are beginning to spring up all over the country and should the season be favorable many varieties may ripen. Some will be seriously frost-bitten.

The Bride—

Miss Eddy, the bride-to-be, has lived in Roseburg for several years. She is a graduate of the Roseburg High School, and later acted as stenographer in her father's law offices in the Masonic building. Last fall she entered Albany College, which she has since attended. During her residence in Roseburg Miss Eddy won a host of friends, who were much surprised to learn that she is soon to become a bride. It is understood here that Mr. and Mrs. Tebault will make their future home in Albany.—Roseburg Review.

Bigger High School—

Members of the Roseburg school board today stated that at their next regular meeting a special election will be called for the purpose of authorizing the issuance of bonds for erecting a high school building in this city. It is probable that $60,000 will be needed, exclusive of the funds realized from the insurance carried on the Lane school structure. The matter of authorizing the bonds will be submitted to the voters of the Roseburg school district. Members of the school board are hopeful that work on the new building can begin as an early date in order that the structure can be completed by next September.—Review.

Here from Pendleton—

Peter Paulus, who has a tailor shop at Pendleton, arrived yesterday for an Albany visit. He reports some real winter weather at Pendleton, at one time three feet on the level.

Merchants Tonight—

Members of the Albany Merchants' Exchange tonight will have their first opportunity to eat as a body at the Whitney Sweet Shop, where an oyster lunch will be served, at the regular monthly meeting of the Association. No formal program has been arranged for the rest of the evening, but there will be something doing.

UNTACTFUL ADAMS

The Pathetic Unpopularity of Our Second President.

HE WAS VAIN AND GLAD OF IT

Then, Too, He Had an Obstinate Personality That Endowed Him With a Positive Genius For Putting Himself in the Worst Possible Light.

The choleric John Adams had been president for more than two years, but as long as Washington lived the country refused to look upon any one else as its real head.

The way of the transgressor may be hard indeed, but it is a path of roses compared with the thorny road the successor to a popular idol must tread, and when one reads the frankly expressed opinion of Adams' party friends and party enemies one's sympathies go out to the man upon whom Washington's presidential mantle fell.

"His moribund highness" was the title the opposition had suggested for him in the days when discussion raged as to what the high officials of the government were to be called. He had great learning, great patriotism and an unquenchable spirit, but overlying and enveloping them all was a positive genius for doing and saying untactful things, for appearing at the worst possible advantage.

A member of his cabinet once said of him that whether he was "sportful, playful, witty, kind, cold, drunk, sober, angry, easy, stiff, jealous, careless, cautious, confident, close or open" he was "almost always so in the wrong place and with the wrong person."

The kindly Franklin characterized him as "always honest, sometimes great, but often mad." One less genial remarked that even in his soberest moments Adams was "the greatest marplot in nature." And John Han-dolph of Roanoke, whose tongue added the poison of ridicule to the bitterness of gall, called him "that political Malvolvo."

Adams thought Washington's talents overrated and on becoming president in his turn was ambitious to make a record brilliant enough to overshadow him. It was certainly no easy task, even without the handicap of Adams' obstinate personality.

He knew that he was vain. "Thank God I am so!" he exclaimed. "Vanity is the cordial drop which makes the bitter cup of life go down." But it had its lingering after taste, and justly proud of his record—having, as one of his biographers puts it, "stepped from his little country law office and proved himself a match for the diplomats of Europe"—Adams resented the narrow margin by which he had been elected, calling himself with some bitterness "the president of three votes only."

A vice president can be removed by nothing short of crime or physical incapacity, and Jefferson remained, an ever present and irritating thorn in Adams' side. Adams had found it hard to learn and accept the passive role demanded by the office, and he evidently took some satisfaction in impressing the same ungracious lessons upon his successor.

Jefferson asserted that he was never consulted upon any question of government after Adams had been two days in power. And he did not make the charge in the humorous mood of a later incumbent, who used to declare that his chief had asked his advice only once and that was about the wording of a Thanksgiving proclamation.

"I believe he always liked me," Adams admitted in a retrospect of his long career, "but he detested Hamilton and my whole administration. Then, he wished to be president of the United States, and I stood in his way. So he did everything that he could to pull me down. But if I should quarrel with him for that I might quarrel with every one I had anything to do with in life. . . . Did you ever hear the lines:

"I love my friend as well as you,
But why should he obstruct my view?
"I forgive my enemies and hope they may find mercy in heaven."—"Our Nation in the Building," by Helen Nicolay, in Century Magazine.

Wesley's Father and Wesley.

One cleric well known to fame who took snuff and loved his pipe was Samuel Wesley, rector of Epworth, Lincolnshire, from 1697 to 1735. He not only smoked his pipe, but sang its praises:

In these raw mornings, when I'm freezing
What can compare with a tobacco pipe?
Primed, cooked and touched, 'twould better
Heat a man
Than the Bath fagots or Scotch warming pan.

Samuel's greater son, John Wesley, did not share the parental love of a pipe. He spoke of the use of tobacco as "an uncleanly and unwholesome self indulgence" and described snuffing as a "silly, nasty, dirty custom."—Westminster Gazette.

What the Well Revealed.

One of the first deep wells drilled in the west was put down near Huxley, Nev., by the Central Pacific railway in 1881. In a search for good water. The boring reached a depth of 2,750 feet, but the water obtained was of very unsatisfactory quality. At 1,700 feet the drill encountered a bed of "petrified clams," and the record states that at 1,800 feet well preserved "redwood timber" was found. Argonaut.

JAPS AND GERMANS TOGETHER

Worked Harmoniously at San Diego
Without Any Disturbance. Different in Europe.

Germany lowered the Japanese flag on the grounds of the Panama-California International Exposition at San Diego a few days ago and charged $8.40 for the job. The representatives of the Mikado paid the bill and gave profound thanks for the work.

It was quite in contrast to conditions existing on the other hemisphere and provided one of the many signs of neutrality among the sixteen foreign nations that are participating in the 1916 exposition. The flag of Japan was attached to the top of a heavy pagoda. In changing the Japanese exhibit it was desired that the top of the pagoda, weighing two tons, be lowered. The Japanese workman sought the aid of the Germans employed on the German exhibit and played on the German exhibit and with derrick and tackle the work was done and the time charged up to Japan.

The task required two hours for seven men, at sixty cents an hour.

Entered U. of O.—

Miss Anne Dawson left Sunday for Eugene and in one of the groups of Albany people at the University of Oregon.

On Mission Business—

Dr. W. P. White went to Portland this morning to attend a business session of the missions, of which he is a member.

Went to Portland—

D. W. Rumbaugh, county horticulturalist, went to Portland this morning ing to meet with the State Board of Horticulture. At this meeting the county fruit inspectors of the state are invited to participate.

Paper Stopped—

A paper down on Coos Bay that was eclipsing all competitors, with an enormous circulation, etc., has just been closed by order of the courts, and an attachment.

Another Burglary—

The Democrat recently mentioned a burglary on Washington street, in which several dollars' worth of things were stolen, causing a lot of trouble to innocent people. On the same evening another house in the next block was also entered. A screen was cut, and some fruit taken and carried off, the jars afterwards being returned. The matter has been placed in the hands of Chief of Police Catlin, who is investigating it. Burglary is burglary whatever the motive.

Willingness to Oblige

THE public has a right to some thing more than perfunctory service from those who supply telephone needs.

There is something more to a telephone service than merely placing at the disposal of the public adequate telephone equipment.

Courtesy, willingness to oblige and patience, under trying conditions on the part of telephone employees, promote friendly feeling and are essential to the best kind of telephone service.
