INDIVIDUAL CHARACTER.

In the house of representatives the other day Congressman Reavis made a short speech that is so readable the Democrat gives it prominence in this place:
The great need in America today is the development of individual character, and you can not develop character in the childhood of America by making them beasts of burden.
If I may be permitted the relation of an intimate incident that occurred in my district last fall, I will say that by reason of being caught in a storm on the public highway and because my automobile insisted on parking itself in a ditch I was compelled to throw myself on the hospitality of a farmer for the night. And after supper was over—for we call it supper out there—and after the dishes had been done away we repaired to the sitting room in that farm home. On one side of the stove the father was raiding his paper, and on the other side the mother was doing her sewing as she talked to me. As we sat there three white-clad little figures came quietly into that little room and knelt by their mother's knee and recited the prayer that has been the glory of this race for more than a hundred years:
Now I lay me down to sleep,
In the eyes of the mother was a holy look. The father, through half-closed lids, seemed to be seeing in the distant future a vision of his little boys and girls, grown to be men and women, doing their part in the work of the world, performing the duties of citizenship. I walked to the window and looked out on the quiet country night and saw the stars swing out through the broken clouds of a dying storm. I heard the patter of baby-feet up the stairway, with the mother following in their wake, and the thought came to me, Mr. Chairman, and the thought is with me now, that the strength of this nation lies not in the vulgar noise and turmoil of your great cities; the strength of this nation is not in the lights and music and far trees of state receptions; the strength of this nation is not in a mighty navy nor a far flung battle-line. The strength of this nation, its promise of today, its fulfillment of tomorrow, lies in the teaching that are being given to the youth of the land in the Christian homes of America.
I would take the children from the factories and the mines and put them in the schools where they belong; that they may be equipped for the future. I would take these children from the mines and the factories and place them upon the playgrounds where bent and wasted bodies may be restored to health and strength. I would have this government, through this congress, say to the man of greed and avarice, whoever he may be, wherever he may be, "No more, no more, except you choose to become a criminal under the laws of your nation, shall you be permitted to coin dollars from the fair white body of a child."

AUTO AND FARMER.

"The automobile is God's greatest gift to the farmer. It has brought him more benefits than any other civilizing agency. Coupled with good roads, it is the greatest force of the age for bettering the farmer's living conditions. It puts him within easy reach of town. It gives him the advantages of the city. It has taught him to live the hours he used to spend in waiting before he learned to live on pneumatics. It takes much of the drudgery out of farming. It keeps the young people on the farm. It keeps him in touch with what others are doing—gives him a chance to get the outside viewpoint, and by placing him in frequent contact with his fellows, puts him in a position to take advantage of what they have learned. It makes better school attendance. It has made a real farmer out of him, because without an automobile he spends half his time as a teamster."—W. S. Allen, Yamhill county.

Preparedness.
Were half the power that fills the world with terror.
Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts.
Given to redeem the mind from error, There were no need of arsenals nor forts.
The warrior's name would be a name abhorred!
And every nation that should lift again
Its hand against a brother, on its forehead
Would wear forever the curse of Cain!
