Attention! Billy Sunday and Billy Bryan! The gross receipts of "The Birth of a Nation" are said to have recently passed the $2,000,000 mark. This sum in itself would be considered a very fair return on a half-million.

Peg O' My Heart.

"Peg O' My Heart" will be presented at the Albany Opera House March 2nd by Oliver Morosco's company. As Mr. Morosco is the producing manager of this famous play, one may be sure that he will give a fine cast and a charming staging of it. That he has picked the members of the cast for their fitness physically and temperamentally to interpret their roles is one of the features that makes the performance really worth while. Florence Martin, who played the title role in Boston last season, has been chosen by Manager Morosco to play the role of Peg, and is surrounded by the original Boston cast.

Peg comes out of America and falls unannounced in the midst of an English family of aristocratic relatives with strict traditions. She walks into the library with her shabby traveling bag in her hand and a shabby, though real dog under her arm, and from then on there is something doing.

Meeting His Fate.

"In the next act the villain dies of quick consumption," remarked the wag whose tongue likes to run with the film.

"Hardly! He weighs at least two hundred pounds."

"No matter. He meets a man-eating lion."

In Mr. Night's House.

In one of the picture houses of the suburbs of Chicago, the performance was started one afternoon with a film showing some scenes in Switzerland.

A woman and her little girl, Nora, were enjoying the views and the latter became very demonstratively interested when the train in the picture plunged into the large black mouth of a tunnel.

"Oh, mamma," she exclaimed, "now I know where the dark hides in the daytime!"

School Days in 1920.

"Well, Robert, what did you study in school this afternoon?"

"We had two films of history and three reels of geography, ma."

Billie Burke's next film appearance will be in a new serial said to be of a very interesting nature and which will be produced by the Kleine company. She is to receive $120,000 for her work in the complete serial the exact nature of which has not been divulged. It was written by Mrs. Rupert Hughes, wife of the well known novelist, who put it into scenario form. Henry Kolker has been engaged to play opposite Miss Burke.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, luncheoners under the Vitaphone banner for some time, have enlisted under the Metro flag. It is announced that they will receive a joint salary of $90,000 a year from the Metro.

Hobart Henley, the Universal star.
