MARKET PROBLEMS.

G. Lansing Hurd, of the Bureau of Markets, Oregon Agricultural College on Saturday presented the following to the Willamette Valley Development League:

One of the first things that the Willamette Valley Development League can and should do in connection with the marketing problem, is to map out a definite program of the work it proposes to undertake. It is a problem that cannot be solved instantly or even quickly; it will take a long campaign of education and organization to achieve any results worth while and an immense amount of patience will be required. To rush headlong after each new-hatched, unfiled scheme that may be offered would be folly indeed. Deliberation, study, wisdom, diligence are necessary. Experience of the past with various plans that were proposed as a panacea for marketing ills all proclaim and demonstrate substitution of this statement both in Oregon and in other states.

I suggest the following as a suitable program to adopt in relation to improvement of marketing conditions in the Willamette Valley counties:

1. Promotion of neighborhood spirit and good will; wherever this exists, organization is easy. Then, organization, in the local communities, of small groups of farmers having a common interest and a common purpose, into appropriate kinds of cooperative associations, as egg circles, poultry associations, live stock shipping societies, growers' associations, farmers' exchanges, cheese factories, cooperative creameries, breeders associations, drainage districts; beginning with the elementary forms of cooperation and advancing as interest is awakened and experience gained.

2. Furnishing inspiration, assistance and direction through demonstrations, meetings and available publicity, in the matter of improvement of the products, community specialization in production, regulation and stabilization of production to meet the demands and opportunities of the markets available, standardization of products, development of community or League brands, and collective assembling, grading and packing.

3. The federation of these small groups or local associations whenever their ability to succeed in primary undertakings has been demonstrated and the members have become educated to the "cooperative spirit."

4. Assistance in financing meritorious cooperative enterprises which may need assistance in getting established.

5. Assistance in organized surveys of market conditions and needs in local communities and throughout the valley; to ascertain the possibilities of production and utilization or consumption, assistance in gathering, articulating and disseminating market news and reports; study of transportation facilities, service and problems.

6. Cooperation with the bureau of markets of Oregon Agricultural College, the Federal office of markets and rural organization, the school of commerce, of the University of Oregon, the railways of the state, the state grange and farmers' unions just federated as "The Oregon Farmers' League," the local newspapers and press associations and all other agencies that may be drawn on for advice, instruction or inspiration in any helpful way.

goods that, will be received, rather than to search out the same products among individual farmers. The farmer is himself to blame many times for the conditions of which he complains when the grocer sends his money away and ships in produce that could and ought to have been obtained at home; for the reason, that the farmers are not organized to furnish adequate and constant supply of properly graded and standardized quality and do not make known what they have to sell, as do the quotations made daily by the regular commission firms. Organization as suggested above will remedy this deficiency and loyalty of the home merchants to the home farmer, in the degree that they desire the loyalty of the farmers to themselves, will make a very material difference in the quantity of home grown produce that is converted into cash. As a corollary of "better business" there there will be "better living" and the farmers will have to spend more money of which the merchants will get a share.

In some places, outside the Willamette valley of course, there are merchants who have banded together in the town to enforce a rule that they will not pay cash for local produce and I know of specific instances where such merchants have sent to Portland for things that could have been purchased of the home farmer, except for adherence to this mistaken and unfair policy.

MISFITS

This Willamette Valley is a little kingdom in itself.

The thing is for the different sections to work together all the time without sectional strife.

According to the papers enough people have been killed in Europe to depopulate the country.

The slaughter has been colossal, human lives being sacrificed like jack rabbits in a drive.

Perhaps you have heard the thrilling story of the Kilkenny cats. Here's the climax:

Except the tips of their tails And the ends of their nails Of the Kilkenny cats there wasn't any.

It looks as if the war will end thusly.

Many of us may forget many things, but not the dramas of our school days.

As Jonathan Wild Butts, the constable, in Cast Your Bread Upon the Waters, Misfits can never forget the wild storms of his heart as he acted the part.

Many plays have their constables; but the world has only one J. W. B.

Internal or External. ((Cottage Grove Sentinel)) Lee Thomason had the misfortune to lose his horse Sunday, the result of being hurt by a potato.

Medford is hardly big enough for one man in that city. A movie artist borrowed his overcoat for use in a picture.

How They Do It.

Herman Rosenfield, advertising manager of Sears, Roebuck & Co., recently told the members of the American Ad Club at a convention: "We have a bureau whose duty it is to reach each week the country newspapers from all over the country. There is not a paper of any consequence in our trade territory that our bureau does not get. This bureau looks over these papers and when we find a town where the merchants are not advertising in the local paper, we immediately flood that territory with our literature. It always brings results far in excess of the same effort put forth in territory where the local merchants use their local paper."
