THE SOLDIER ROSE.

(By F. B. Newland)

In grief a little maid did say,
That rose lives passed all in a day;
Why should rose beauty fade she said,
And where had sweet rose spirits fled?
And what of the after lives they led
In the rose heaven for the dead.
Would they bloom on the golden street.

Make bright the path for soldiers feet?
When they are called from here and given
That great reunion march in Heaven.
A pretty rose its young life gave
To beautify a soldiers grave,
How like the boy who marched away
And gave his life while young and gay.
To make our country good and great,
And glorify each star horn state.
Can we this day appreciate
What soldiers did, can men relate?
Can orators and poets tell?
How they passed thru the fires of hell.
To give us back the land we love,
May hovering angels from above,
Guide them thru every weary step,
Lest we forget, lest we forget.

Hang out the old flag on the gate,
At half mast grieving for its mate
Who carried it towards the sun,
Thru shot and shell and flame and won.

Jolly Boy Blue, his life, he gave,
No man among us is a slave,
Bring on the roses for the grave,
And decorate each soldiers grave.

The Soldier Rose is out in bloom,
A fair maid takes it to his tomb,
Her heart bloom gives with loving hand.

To the patriot that saved the land,
The veteran blue, is kind today,
Above the necktie he wears gray,
The Dixie veteran grows old, too,
No doubt their heads have all turned blue.

Each grips the other's time-worn hand
Now for one flag, now for one land,
Sweet roses bloom and flowers of May.

For U. S. heroes, blue and gray.

Kind Ladies of the G. A. R.,
They are the heroines of the war,
They nursed and loved both blue and gray.

And married those who got away,
And in the long, long days of war,
They dress full many a hero's scar;
Today they bake and sew for them,
And help to spend that dough for them.

Fifinella Won.

(By United Press)

New Market, May 30.—E. Hulton's horse Fifinella won the Derby this afternoon from a field of ten starters.
Kwangu, a heavy favorite, was second,
and Hasavian was third. King
George's white Pearl failed to start.
The race was called the new derby,
supplanting temporarily the Derby day races, which lost their glamor
during the war.

of its kind that has ever been offered to a theatre audience in Albany.

tists, but little J. C. Jr., who is but 6 years old is in a class by himself.
This little star is assisted by his two little sisters and mother and father offering a little play of their own, entitled Christmas eve. They will be at the Globe Theatre Friday, Saturday and Sunday.
