BIG BUSINESS WORRIES.

Farm and Fireside: Curious things happen in the world of big business. Some time ago the financial district of New York had a "peace scare."

The rumors proved groundless; prices firmed up again, and then came along a "war scare"—worry about the possibility that the United States would presently be drawn into the war.

It's hard to please these market operators. If the farmers of the south had got half that panicky over cotton in the last months of 1914, there wouldn't have been a bale in the country today.

THE U. S. IS THERE.

A few months ago the United States mint bought a big lot of silver bullion at 48 1/2 cents the ounce. That purchase came at a time when silver mines were threatening to shut down because of the low price.

Right afterward the price of silver began to go up. It touched 73 cents an ounce a day or two before this writing, at which point Uncle Sam had made a profit of about a million and a half of dollars on his one purchase.

The war has set the Old World governments forcing out other forms of money in place of gold, which they are hoarding. Silver, being universally familiar, and being "hard money," looks good as a substitute.

MEMORIES OF THE WEST.

Mrs. Eliza Spalding Warren, of Walla Walla, Wash., has just had published in book form her collection of the memories of her father's and mother's lives on the early western frontier, as missionaries among the Indians of Oregon and Idaho, says the Times.

It contains, among other facts, a diary by Mrs. Spalding. This is the daily record of that long, hard journey from New York to Portland, early in the year 1836, when Drs. Whitman and Spalding, accompanied by their wives, came west in wagons and proved that wheels could cross the Rockies.

The book contains an account of the Nez Percés Indians and a sketch of the life of Chief Joseph, the Pontiac of the West. Facts about the Whitman massacre and its causes are published in this book for the first time.

can be purchased for $1.50 at J. K. Gill's in Portland, Mrs. E. S. Warren, Walla Walla, Wash., or from L. C. Callaway, Brownsville, Oregon.

MISFITS

The Oregonian continues to bark at the heels of President Wilson.

Purely politics, it criticizes the president continually.

As a matter of fact his Mexican policy has been a humane and masterly one. It was his business to wait. It was not his business to fight until there was occasion.

If such papers as the Oregonian had their way the U. S. would long ago have been involved in the European war, the most diabolical in the history of the world.

We would have been at war with Mexico at a time when it would have been criminal.

At this time it is the duty of loyal people to sustain the president, and not growl, to help and not retard.

Men ought to be big enough to rise above political prejudice when occasion calls for it, as it does now.

The German-American Alliance claims it secured the nomination of Mr. Hughes. How do the English like that? A president should be neutral, likewise a candidate.

President Wilson has always been neutral, tempered with justice.

An editor elsewhere says he has been gosh ding busy.

Funny ads, always interest one. This calls for attention: Hyra E. Evans, clairvoyant and impressionist; also strictly fresh eggs.

out a list of nominees on the Democratic ticket for state and county offices. We started and then gave up.

The list contains about as many republicans as Democrats, fellows who squeezed in between the lines.

Democratic nominees, nevertheless, they are entitled to Democratic support, for a majority rules.

Clear across the page of the S. F. Bulletin in vermilion letters, are the words "Angels Land on Seals."

The Angels ought to be above such an act.

Some one says that Charlie Chaplin is petering out, and that the public doesn't care for him any more. Perhaps; but we'll wager a borrowed umbrella that the next time he comes to Albany the house is packed.
