E. C. PEERY, CANDIDATE FOR REPRESENTATIVE SPEAKS

Is Clean Cut in His Position on Important Issues Before the People.

Having been chosen at the recent primary election to be one of the three democratic standard bearers to make the race for the legislature at the coming election in November, I deem it but fair to the voters of Linn county that they be permitted to know by position on the more important issues which I intend to discuss during this campaign.

As for the nominal differences between the democratic and republican parties, there is not one at present that is vital. The tariff, the only legitimate partisan issue is being recommended by both parties to be left to a tariff commission. There is no partisan question in Mexico. There is no partisan question in preparedness. There is no partisan question in the Philippines, the shipping bill nor rural credits. The fact is that both the great parties are going through a period of readjustment and, today, there is more dispute between republicans and republicans and democrats and democrats, than between democrats and republicans.

Partisan questions have been eliminated from our state legislature since the inauguration of the system of electing United States senators by direct vote of the people. Our legislative body, as a consequence, has been converted into an organization to make and unmake laws and to transact the business of the state. I shall therefore, discuss only such measures as are related to state, county and municipal affairs.

Too many laws and too much unnecessary inspection involving fees, commissions and salaries, are combining to burden the taxpayer and to discourage the bringing into the state of new capital and new industries. This unfortunate condition is a hundred boats were wanted and all Jamaica was scoured to secure them. Each boat had to have an oriental sail, so a hundred sails were made, all dyed a dark red to harmonize with the landscape. And these boats appear on the scene for just eight seconds!

DUN'S REPORT FAVORABLE.

In the Aggregate Transactions Greater Than in Any Other Year.

In certain leading branches of business, such as in steel, textiles and leather, new domestic demands have slackened perceptibly and prices are easier. Yet this is the normal period for a lull in the lines affected, and there is now all the more reason for it because of the previous extraordinary activity. Requirements in many instances are covered far ahead and buyers are naturally disposed to proceed more slowly, while signs multiply that the element of cost is no longer a matter of secondary consideration with consumers. The fact remains, however, that, in the aggregate, transactions are greater than in any other year and the problem of manufacturers is not one of securing new orders, but of finding sufficient men and materials with which to do all the work there is to be done. The labor situation is less disturbing, yet there is much complaint of the shortage of skilled hands and production in some industries is hampered at a time when deliveries are backward.

largely due to the fact that we have been too lax in electing the right kind of men to our legislature. True, the small salary is no inducement for a man of even average business ability to seek such a position, and it is only an unselfish interest in the welfare of the state that such men permit the sacrifice of their time and money. These burdensome laws are being felt, not only in the state as a whole, but in our counties and municipalities as well. For instance, one hotel man in this state furnished a list of inspectors who made inspections of various departments in his hotel as follows:

- Building inspector
- Electric inspector
- Sidewalk inspector
- Water inspector
- Sanitary inspector
- Game inspector
- Milk inspector
- Labor inspector
- Welfare inspector
- License inspector
- Dance Hall inspector

This list does not include representatives of the national government, the sheriff, police nor fire departments.

I favor the abolishment of the law permitting school text books to be changed every six years.

I believe that the law authorizing school supervisors in each county should be amended so that the county could decide by majority vote whether it desires a supervisor or not.

The principal objection to our direct primary law is that it does not provide for representation in sparsely settled districts as against the more densely populated sections. To overcome this objectionable feature, I favor dividing the county in three districts for the purpose of nominating county commissioners and also representatives to the legislature. This would be for nominating purposes only, as the elective power could not be changed without an amendment to our state constitution. By this means each section of the county would have a representative in both our county and state affairs. This plan would represent the county as a whole more intelligently and more effectively, than is the case at present and should be adopted.

I am opposed to any change in the location of our state university, as the cost would be too great to justify any advantage that might be gained by such move.

I do not favor the establishment of any additional courts to handle the judicial business of the state at the expense of the taxpayers.

In conclusion permit me to say that I shall discuss more fully from time to time the measures referred to in this article, as well as some others omitted for lack of space.

My purpose is to address the voters both from the platform and through the press, realizing that these measures can be gained only by an open and positive course and that no decisive action ever lacked the disapproval of those of opposite views.

What Roger W. Babson Says of Fox's $1,000,000 Picture, "A Daughter of the Gods."

By Roger W. Babson Recently, on the Island of Jamaica I was with Herbert Brennon (who first made his reputation as the director of "Neptune's Daughter") while he was preparing a new play at a cost of perhaps $1,000,000. Talk about geometrical progression! Here is a jump in the cost of production from $10,000 to $100,000 in five years and then from $100,000,000 in only one year! Brennon's new William Fox picture has cost $1,000,000.

For the setting of this new play an old Spanish fort was necessary, so the sunny seas were searched in order to get one. The most suitable one was found half under water at Kingston, Jamaica. It was called Fort Augusta. To pump out the water, drain the land, kill the mosquitoes and fill in cost $100,000. But this was only the beginning.

The story made it necessary that a Moorish city should be built behind this fort. In this city must be a real palace, an actual slave market, stores of all kinds and everything else that one sees in an old Moorish city. Moreover, these stores must be full of goods, cloth, pottery, baskets, provisions, etc., the streets must be full of people and all the people must be black and have Oriental costumes.

Such city was built, so that when a stranger entered the harbor of Kingston, Jamaica, in February of this year this new movie city was more in evidence than was old Kingston itself. To build this city is said to have cost between $300,000 and $400,000.

But the building of the city was only a part of the expense. As I have said, it must be populated, and all of the inhabitants had to be hired at from 50 cents a day upward. The day I was there 750 actors were performing. For the day on which I left Jamaica over 3,000 were engaged and some days the number ran up to 5,000, all of whom must be provided with costumes and many with helmets, spears or bows and armor.

For one scene in one day Mr. Brennon wanted the use of ten camels for about five minutes. Arrangements were made with the manager of a circus in New York for ten camels to be sent at a cost of $200 a day—total cost $7,000. When you see this play on the screen these camels will show for just ten seconds—cost $700 a second for the camels alone!

And yet this great Moorish city, costing half a million dollars, is only one scene of the story. A little gnome city was also constructed at St. Ann's Bay, for another scene in which 500 little children performed as fairies. Other scenes have been taken under water in the harbor of Kingston with twenty famous swimmers from New York dressed as mermaids. Miss Kellermann, the star of the story, was even taken up in the forests of Jamaica and with her hands tied allowed to float down a rapid stream and over a natural precipice.

Actually no expense has been spared. Anything wanted has been secured, whatever the cost. For one scene
