FEATS OF FANATICS

Dervishes of the Orient and Their Curious Practices

SEEM INSENSIBLE TO PAIN.

These Religious Enthusiasts Cut and Slash Themselves, and Under Correct Conditions No Blood Flows—Magical Cures by the Sheikh.

Much has been written on the subject of the astounding things that are done by dervishes and the apparent insensitivity to pain and injury that their fanaticism gives them, but the vivid account given by a writer in Blackwood's of some of these facts witnessed by himself cannot fail to prove of interest.

"In Constantinople you may see at any time howling dervishes, who howl professionally in their worship, and in Konia, whirling dervishes, who similarly whirl instead of howl. And upon the road and in villages and country towns of the Turkish empire are to be met dervishes of the mendicant orders —wild eyed, austere men carrying bowl and battle ax, who wander about to places where most alms may be found.
But those dervishes who lacerate themselves as the aim of their ecstasy are not, I think, to be found in any district near the coast or easy of access.
In only one small town, a long way in the interior of Asia Minor, did I ever see one of their performances, and then it was in the way of a favor."

After describing the long processes of preparation by which the necessary "atmosphere" is obtained, the writer goes on:

"Presently two men left the semi-circle of dervishes and stood before the sheik. On them the preparation had done its work and they were ready to begin laceration. The sheik licked the blades of two thin dagger-like knives with his tongue and handed them to the devotees. Each immediately pressed the knife through his own cheeks. It went in at one side and the point came out at the other.
Meanwhile the swordsmen leaped and the semicircle roared and swayed with redoubled energy."

"Again the sheik licked two knives and handed them to the men, and again they pushed them through their cheeks, this time in the opposite direction. No blood flowed, and the operation looked as harmless, once you had seen it done, as stabbing a Dutch cheese. The sheik drew out the knives, wiped the ball of his thumb upon his tongue, clapped it on the holes, and no blood could be seen, but merely white scars."

"Now, one who has not seen these or similar things done may think that some slight of hand took place, or failing that possibility, that I imagined these sights, being under strong influence so to do. I can only offer the evidence of my senses. I was within a distance of two or three yards when the cheeks were pierced, looked at them from two feet with the knives still in position, and at the same distance looked at the white scars that a few seconds before had been palpable holes. If I was hypnotized so were all of us, for we saw alike."

"When the display with knives was over two other men came forward as candidates for the spiked balls. The upper and lower points of the spikes were licked by the sheik and play began. The lower point was placed in the open palm of one hand, the upper point was capped by the open palm of the other, and then by a slight circular movement of the upper hand the ball was rotated violently. As it did so short lengths of chain attached to the circumference spread out and acted

OREGON NEWSPAPER MAN WEDS NEW JERSEY GIRL

Franklin S. Allen, son of S. D. Allen of Eugene, will marry Miss Catherine Babcock, daughter of Dr. Wm. Frederick Babcock, a Jersey City educator, today. The couple met four years ago while Allen was associate editor of Photo-Era Magazine, in Boston, and Miss Babcock a contributor. After their honeymoon, which will extend through the east, they will return to Seattle, where Mr. Allen's headquarters with the Barron G. Collier Co., Inc., are located. Miss Babcock is a graduate of Holyoke college and a member of the Chi Delta Theta sorority. Mr. Allen is a former student at the University of Oregon, where he was prominent in literary and newspaper work, and graduated from the University of Virginia. He is a member of Theta Delta Chi fraternity. After returning from Virginia he occupied the position of city editor of the Eugene Guard, and later went to Portland where he was connected with the Oregonian. Allen is well known in Albany.

as a flywheel. With the balls spinning in this fashion the men began to leap, throwing them into the air, catching them with the point on an open palm and always keeping up the spinning.

"It was clever in its way, but no more, and I was thinking it a simple trick when one man dashed the spiked point forebly into his head. The other fellow immediately followed by thrusting his into his neck. Both balls fell over and hung suspended with the point remaining in the flesh. These wounds immediately drew blood. Blood drawing, however, was not in the game. It showed something amiss—in sufficient faith or preparation or both—and the sheik hastened to staunch it.
His thumb went first to his infallible tongue and then to the wounds. The flow ceased under the application, and other men took up the balls. Sometimes they drew blood and sometimes not, but all the wounds made were immediately closed by the sheik and left only white scars. And these, like the other scars, whether you believe it or not, presently faded out of sight."

"It was nearing midnight when all was over. In the bazaar the next morning I recognized one of those who had used the spiked balls on the previous evening. He now appeared as an open faced youngster of eighteen or nineteen, with a smile that he could not suppress. He said he worked in the iron bazaar hard by, making rough hinges and other ironwork. And while he stood there, smiling and ingenious, it needed an effort of mind to think of him as a fanatical dervish of the previous night's scene."

LAWYERS FOUGHT.

In the justice court at Toledo Saturday, in the case of the State vs.
Berry, the prosecuting attorney called H. N. Waterbury, the defendant's attorney, a liar, and the lawyers came to blows. One of the jurymen jumped in and separated the belligerents, and after an apology to the court, proceedings were resumed.

D. A. R. ATTENTION!

To Members of Linn Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution: When the nation calls out our men for her protection, then is come our time to serve. The coast artillery of Oregon has its quota of Albany men, who, when called, must go, and would better go prepared for whatever conditions may be in store for them. That this preparation may be made at once, the members of Linn chapter are asked to meet with the regent at 540 West Seventh Street Saturday afternoon, July 1, at 3 o'clock, when conditions of importance to all of us will be discussed.

MRS. L. E. TRACEY,
