HE WANTED A BATH

And, Curiously Enough, That Fact Won Him a Lot of Fame.

QUEER TALE OF A LONDON INN

The Commotion a Traveler Fresh From Australia Kicked Up in the Blue Boar Tavern by a Simple Request That Made Him an Object of Wonder.

I cherish the thought, says the author of the autobiography entitled "The Record of Nicholas Freydon," that I have become something of a tradition at the Blue Boar Inn, in London, where I have reason to think I am remembered today by a now aged Boots and others—many, many others—as "the genelman as ordered a bawth."

I happened on the Blue Boar, a new arrival from Australia, and stayed there for two nights. On rising after my first sleepless night I went prowling all about the house in search of the bathroom. Finally I was routed back to my room by a newly awakened maid (in curl pins), who told me rather crossly that I could not have a "bawth" unless I ordered it "before-hand." I was in a hurry to get outdoors, so I did without my bath and promised myself I would see to it later in the day.

That afternoon, footsore, tired and feeling inexplicably grimy, I interviewed the lady again and begged permission to have a bath. She was then in much brighter humor and in curls in place of pins. She promised to arrange the matter shortly and to send some one to warn me when the moment had arrived. Where could I be found?

"Oh, I'll go and undress at once," I said.

"No, don't do that, sir; I can't get a bawth all in a minute," she told me. "Perhaps you'd like to write in the smokin' room."

I agreed at once and retired to the flyblown smoking room, where there was an ample choice of distraction for a writing man between a moth-eaten volume entitled "Kira's Concordance" and a Southeastern Railway time table cover, very solidly fastened, but with nothing inside. Presently Boots came in, elderly and sad, but furtively bird-like both in the way he jerked his head on one side and in the jerky quickness of his movements.

"You the genelman as ordred er bawth?" he asked anxiously. I admitted it, and he gave a long sigh of relief.

"Oo! All right," he said, almost gladly. "I'll fetcher know when it's ready."

And he hopped out. I yawned, opened the concordance and shut it again hastily, by reason of the extraordinary pungent mustiness its pages emitted. Then I went prospecting into the passage between the stairs and the private bar. Here I passed a middle aged lady sat, eating waffles from a plate with the aid of a hairpin. Her face lighted up with sudden interest as she saw me.

"Oo?" she cried with alacrity. "Er you the genelman as ordred er bawth?" Again I pleaded guilty, and with a broad, reassuring smile, as of one who should say, "Bless you, we've had visitors just as mad as you before this," she nodded her ringleted head and said: "Right you are, sir. I'll send Boots to fetcher know when it's ready."

Apart from consideration of her occupation, which demanded privacy, I could not stand gazing at this lady, and so I passed on to my only refuge from the concordance-room—the private bar. There was a really splendid young lady in attendance here, who smiled upon me so sweetly that I felt constrained to order a lemon squash. While I pondered, with one hand on the counter, the still smiling barmaid opened conversation brightly.

"Er you the genelman what's ordred er bawth?" she asked eagerly. I began to feel that there must be some kind of London joke about this formula. Perhaps it is a phrase in the current comic opera, I thought. The play hung indifferently waiting I heard a voice in the passage outside and recognized it as belonging to that elderly bird, Boots.

"No, I ain't a-wastin' uv me time," it said. "I'm a-lookin' fer some one. I suppose you ain't seed the genelman as ordred er bawth anywhere abart, 'ave yer?"

Fearful lest further delay should lead to the bricking up of the bathroom or to a crier's being sent round the town for the "genelman" and so forth, I hastened out almost into the

"THE GIRL WITH THE GREEN EYES"

The Girl With the Green Eyes, one of Clyde Fitch's most popular dramas, has been made into a photoplay and released by Pathe on the Gold Rooster Program. It will be shown at the Globe theatre tonight with Katharine Kaelred and Julian L'Estrange in the leading roles.

As may be supposed, the "green eyes" are purely metaphorical and indicative of the jealousy-tinted vision of their possessor. She is Helen Travers (Katharine Kaelred), wife of Edward Travers (Julian L'Estrange), an actor of note and the idol of hundreds of matinee maids.

If you loved your husband jealously and learned from an acquaintance of his that he was keeping an establishment in another part of the city, and you went there to surprise him, only to find that he was caring for his sister, and you lost his love because of your jealousy, what would you do? Would you do what the Girl With the Green Eyes did? See the Globe theatre measures she took, at the Globe theatre.

WE DON'T WORK AT ALL.

In Fact, We Have No Time to, as This Argument Proves.

With the present agitation for an ever increasingly short working day comes the statistician who proves that by rights the American workman should work only one day. Follow the argument closely:

There are by common consent 365 days in the year. Doctors agree that a man should devote one-third of his time to sleep and one-third to recreation. Counting one-third of a year as approximately 122 days, we have 121 days left after taking out this allowance.

Subtract from this the fifty-two Sundays which are the workman's right, and we have sixty-nine days left. Saturday half holidays consume twenty-six of these, leaving forty-three.

One hour off for lunch on five days in the week make 200 hours, or approximately twenty-two days, which leaves our total working time twenty-one days. But a man is entitled to a two weeks' vacation in the summer and the six legal holidays afforded by the state, making a total vacation time of twenty days. Taking this from our working time of twenty-one days, we have a remainder of one working day.—New York Tribune.

arms of the retainer and forcibly checked him as he began on an interrogative note to cheer on. "You the genelman as ordred er bawth?"

Coming from a country where, even in the poorest workman's house, the bathroom at all events is always in commission, I was especially struck by this incident, more especially when an hour later I heard the chambermaid cry out over the banisters:

"Mibel! The genelman as ordred er bawth sez 'e'll 'ave a chop wiv 'is tea'!"

"BLAZING LOVE" MADE POWERFUL AND INTENSE

"Blazing Love" seems to be an apt title for the photo play in which beautiful Virginia Pearson, the William Fox star, is featured at the Rolfe theatre tonight and Saturday. The fascinating narrative of "Blazing Love" is a common life problem. The play breathes of the strong passion of one sex for the other and several complicated triangles appear at different stages in the play. It is gorgeously produced according to William Fox standards, and Virginia Pearson, who has rightfully earned the title of the Modern Cleopatra, appears at her best. This popular beauty will be welcomed by Albany theatre goers.

have such perfect heat insulation that the heat generated is concentrated on the food and not on the cook. The G-E range does perfect work because of the positive and exact control over temperatures which its construction gives to the operator. Furthermore, all vapors and natural juices are retained and cooked through the meat with their full flavor and nutritive value. For this reason, also, shrinkage of food is less.
