EXTRAVAGANT EUGENIE.

The Empress Boasted That She Never Wore a Gown Twice.

It is true that the cost of women's dress has so increased that it is not given to the many to be as truly elegant as their grandmothers were able to be at comparatively small cost. But, then, those were the days when an elaborate ball gown consisted of yards of flounces of tulle and lace or other light and uncostly material.

Empress Eugenie, it is said, declared she never wore the same gown twice. She it was, by the way, who made Worth, the renowned Paris couturier, famous. The great luxury in those days was to wear several ball gowns during the course of a single ball. Dressing rooms were provided, and the ladies retired to reappear resplendent and as fresh as at the beginning of the evening. The gowns of the day, which were flimsy of train and spread by crinolines, suffered much from an evening's wear; hence these wasteful ways.

There is a tale of the lovely Empress Elizabeth of Austria which recounts her appearing at a function in a white tulle gown, flounced and ample, decorated with garlands of real camellias, and changing both gown and camellias every now and then to preserve the impression of absolute and uncrumpled freshness.—Vogue Magazine.

Bird Stories.
A German scientific journal published in 1897 a story to the effect that a golden eagle shot in that year at Eszseg, Slavonia, was found to have a ring about its neck engraved on which were the arms of a Slavonian family and the date 1646.

In 1793 the Gentleman's Magazine told about a hawk, captured when flying in the vicinity of the Cape of Good Hope and taken by an Indian ship to England, which wore a gold collar inscribed:

"This goodie hawk doth belong to his Most Excellent Majesty James, King of England, A. D. 1610."

If this bird really escaped from England in the reign of James 183 years elapsed between its escape and its recapture, and it had flown a distance of 9,500 miles away from its former owner.

Don't Drift Away From Your Friends

There are so many times when a cheery telephone message from you would mean much to your friends in nearby towns.

The fact that you can't see them so often is all the more reason why you should talk to them oftener, and an inexpensive telephone talk occasionally will work wonders. Consult the list of toll rates to cities hereabout; it's in the front of your Bell directory.

Just let YOUR TELEPHONE keep YOU from drifting away from your friends.
