TWO PORTLAND MEN RETURN FROM BREITENBUSH

Cool Weather. With Dampness Has Kept People Away This Year.

Dan Sullivan and David Lightner, of Portland, returned last night from Breitenbush, where they spent a couple of weeks in the mud baths for the benefit of some rheumatism. They reported it too damp there recently for things rheumatic. On account of the cool weather not many have been in yet. Just before they left three young ladies arrived from Albany, slim and good looking, one having red hair, they thought a bank clerk. Ted Schlosser and Dr. Cox had been there several days keeping the mud baths stirred up.

Sullivan is a former Albany boy, who left here with his folks seven years ago, his father being a Southern Pacific employe. Lightner has charge of news stands in Portland doing a big business. Young Sullivan is working for a seed house.

Seattle to Have Land Show.

Seattle, Aug. 10.—More than 70,000 square feet of space in the heart of the business district of Seattle will be given over to housing a display of the agricultural resources of the states of the Northwest from October 4 to 14. This will be the first of the so-called land shows to be held in Seattle.

Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, British Columbia and Alaska will have part in the display. The railroads have taken space and will furnish a comprehensive display of the resources along their lines to show the opportunities for investors and homeseekers.

There will be displayed the exhibits from many counties and communities over the Northwest. Montana will send a fine display. Exhibits will be collected from state fair at Salem, Oregon; Interstate fair at Boise, state fair at Helena, Montana; state fair at North Yakima, Washington, and the Vancouver exhibition, Vancouver, B. C. The Alaska exhibit is now being assembled by secretaries of commercial bodies in the north in cooperation with the Alaska bureau of the Seattle chamber of commerce.

BORDER BOOMS.

Soldiers Spend all Their Money and Make Things Sizzle all the Time

Nogales, Ariz., Aug. 9.—Never since the days of '49 has the west seen such a gold rush as is now progressing along the border from here to the Gulf of Mexico.

Regular army officers who have seen all militia contingents along the northern edge of Mexico ending their "inspection" here agree that hucksters will coin millions if the guardsmen remain even a month longer.

A leading Nogales bank publishing its cleavings, showed an increase of $70,000 during July. Never before has this bank contained so much money, its president said. Officers estimate it on an average, guardsmen spend ten to fifty cents a day, $20,000 goes into the pockets of hucksters every day, with probably $50,000 spent on Sunday.

"Gold digger," is the soldierly expression of a huckster. It sprang into being a few weeks after the arrival on the border, when jitneys raised prices from five to fifteen cents, lunch counters doubled prices; soda emporiums treated nickles as pennies, and all hucksters joined in a boost of the cost of living. Guardsmen refused to spend, and prices immediately dropped with a bang and nickles again rolled in.

It is estimated today that half of the California troopers are "dead broke."

The visit of the militia has transformed Nogales from a sleepy border town into a center of prosperity such as this region has seldom seen.

SHAMS OF HIGH LIFE ARE DARINGLY PICTURED

Everybody familiar with the social life of every city from Atlantic to Pacific knows the social shams which come of false standards, usually associated with wealth and ambition. But probably never has this familiar defect of our American life been so boldly and effectively laid before the gaze of all as in the William Fox photodrama, "Hypocrisy," in which that Southern beauty, Virginia Pearson, is leading woman.

The picture play "Hypocrisy" tells with a forceful moral just what makes so-called high society really so low in many of the phases. It lays bare the vices of social ambition, marriage for anything but love, men's business race for gold, women's climb to social glory, and all the dangers of gambling, whether in stocks and bonds or at the fashionable "bridge."

Miss Pearson as the wife of a "man of the world" in her film life in "Hypocrisy" goes through with unhappy result all these stages. Her husband and lover are money mad, and she has a failing for bridge which leads her into debt. Her love of dress brings her deeper into that indebtedness which shows the truth in the tradespeople's axiom, "It is only the poor who pay their bills."

The play will be seen at the Rolfe Friday.
