HUGHES DODGES ISSUE ON EIGHT HOUR LAW

Attacks Wilson's Plan, but Won't Say What He Would Have Done.

ONLY WAY TO AVERT STRIKE.

Republican Nominee is Asked to Declare if He Would Have Vetoes the Bill With the Certain Assurance of Industrial Disaster to the Country.

So busy has been Charles E. Hughes criticizing the deeds of the Wilson administration that he has had little time to tell or has purposely evaded telling the public what he would have done had he been president under similar circumstances.

Lately Mr. Hughes has turned his attacks upon President Wilson's successful settlement of the crisis in the railroad world by causing to be passed by congress the Adamson eight hour bill. Mr. Hughes has characterized this action as a "surrender to force," he is "opposed to being dictated to by any power on earth before the facts are known," and he would not act until he had had a "fair investigation and candid treatment."

Taking issue with the Republican candidate's attitude, the New York Times in an editorial asks: "What would Mr. Hughes have done?" "Well, what would Mr. Hughes have done?" continues the Times. "What would he have done? Here was Mr. Wilson's position: The brotherhoods refused arbitration; the railroad presidents would not accept the settlement Mr. Wilson proposed, granting the eight hour standard day, with provision for an impartial inquiry into its working. There was no law on the statute books to enforce arbitration.

"The president knew, knew with certainty and beyond question, that he could not get such a law from the congress now in session. The sure and inevitable alternative to his acceptance of the eight hour standard day measure was a strike, the suspension of railway service, freight and passenger, all over the country, beginning on the morning of Sept. 4.

Would Hughes Have Done It? "Mr. Hughes would not surrender to anybody in the country. Then he would have surrendered the country to the disturbance, immeasurable loss and peril of a strike. Would he, in fact, have done that? Had he been president, confronted by that situation, would Mr. Hughes have brought on a strike by refusing to sign the bill granting a wage increase?"

"There was the strike in plain sight, a few hours away, sure to come. Would Mr. Hughes have vetoed the bill? On the contrary, would he not have done just what Mr. Wilson did, sign it?"

"The Republican candidate stands for two things—first, for the principle of fair, impartial, thorough, candid arbitration, and, second, for legislation on facts according to the necessities of the case." Mr. Wilson stands for those two things and, much more, has pledged himself to use all his influence to secure them.

"What more could Mr. Hughes do? Would he be too much to ask the Republican candidate to put a little common fairness into his speeches? Is he afraid to tell his audiences what the president actually did urge upon congress?"

"As a true champion of arbitration President Wilson recommended that arbitration judgments be made records of a court of law in order that their interpretation and enforcement may not lie with the parties to the dispute, but with an impartial and authoritative tribunal." It was his purpose to provide against future emergencies to what he nearly succeeded in doing in the White House conferences would put such a face upon the matter that prevent the recurrence of such dangers as then confronted him and the country.

"The people of the United States are not going to be put off with the mis-information as to what the president did to avert a strike and to prevent the threat of future strikes. We have reason to believe that the full revelation of what he did, what he tried to do and Republican efforts to make an issue of it would fall entirely flat.

Advice to Railroads. "But the people do know, for it was before them in the president's address to congress, that he proposed, not a single emergency act, but a broad program of legislation to meet a public need and permanently remove a public danger. It was a program which we are convinced the railroads would be very wise to accept in its entirety. "Certainly it seems to us that they are ill advised to pray for the election of Mr. Hughes, who, if we take him at his word, would have brought on the strike, with all its irreparable injuries to the country's business and peril for the country's peace."

Lane will deliver the closing sermon and will preside at the procession in which the choristers of the church and the pupils of the academy will participate. The public is welcome at these services.

COLLEGE TEAM LOSES TO HIGH SCHOOL PLAYERS

In the scrimmage last night between the college team and the high school team the latter clearly outplayed the collegians, apparently putting more pep into the game. At least four touchdowns would have been made. Nevertheless the college boys showed up well and have the material for a strong team. Last night two or three of the regular players were unable to play. The work of the high school indicates that the valley championship is hovering over the city.

FAIRBANKS' JOYOUS DISPOSITION THE PLOT

No actor appearing on the screen is more popular than Douglas Fairbanks, who is at the Globe tonight in "The Habit of Happiness." This play affords Fairbanks an excellent opportunity to display his sympathetic comedy talents, and the way he goes about the business of making other people happy not only brings smiles, but warms the hearts of the crowd watching the film. The comedy is also good.
