SATURDAY NIGHT THOUGHTS.

The war continues indefinitely with little to show for the slaughter.

With seventeen days to election left for campaigning the issues are pretty well made up, and it is doubtful if anything new can be sprung to influence voters one way or the other.

This week wheat made a high mark. It is putting the farmer in clover, because it comes early in the season before much wheat has been sold or contracted.

This week Albany has had a conference of men from the three northwestern states, men whose mission is simply to help their fellow men, going out into the places not touched by others, and therefore called missionaries.

Sometimes men by false pretenses can secure business, and appear to be doing well; but in the long run the straightforward course is the one that counts, even from a financial standpoint, for it is a fact, proven thousands of times, that "murder will out," and whatever is gained by dishonesty is lost in the wind-up.

Football, that rough old game, is here in all of its ferocity, drawing big crowds where the rep. calls for it. Rough as it is, it is a game of wonderful generalship, and the rattle-headed fellow has no business in the line-up.

MISFITS

When Os. West was gov. of Or. if he pardoned a prisoner or let one out on probation there was an awful howl went up from the Oregonian.

Hughes, who is whacking President Wilson for securing the passage of the eight-hour bill also whacks Congressman Hawley, who voted for it. Funny old world, isn't it?

"Speaking of mixtures, there is a good one in Wisconsin. Senator LaFollette is running for reelection on the republican ticket. He voted for the Underwood tariff bill and the Adamson eight hour bill, both of which Mr. Hughes is fighting.

We are glad to report that Mr. Hughes is keeping up his plan of campaign, criticism. It's making votes for Wilson.

A man and woman married at Oregon City this week started married life by having a political quarrel, one being for Wilson, the other for Hughes.

Misfits knows of several families in Albany where they are divided that way and yet live as harmoniously together as a couple of kittens.

The Oregonian has a cartoon on Wilson's words. A correct one would show all of them with points, constructive in character, effective in result.

We have had no American statesmen who have used words to better effect than Wilson, with more at their back.

What about Hughes' words? Mostly equivocation, evasion of issues, platitudes, non-constructive, stragglers, of a nagging character, lacking pep.

Escaped Calamity.

Cottage Grove Sentinel: H. B. Bailey captured a huge spider Monday. The insect was sporting itself on Mr. Bailey's screen door. After "de-naturalizing" his catch in a bottle of alcohol, Mr. Bailey took it to a physician, who said that if it had bitten him he would have known something had happened.

The N. Y. Herald, supporting Mr. Hughes, gives Wilson after a poll, 312 electoral votes, 226 are necessary for election. The Democrat's guess is over 400 for Wilson.

A Railroad President Said:

Prosperity was on its way when the European war broke out and the war is not the cause of the great business in the United States, but only served to hasten it. I expect to see the boom keep up, even though the war should end tomorrow. —E. S. Kearney, President of the Wabash railroad.
