WANTS WAR PREVENTED

Members of Both Houses of Congress From West Indorse the League to Enforce Peace.

New York, Nov. 8.—"The destructiveness and horrors of this war should lead every man to welcome any movement tending to prevent wars," says Senator W. L. Jones, of Washington, in a letter to Wm. H. Taft, President of the League to Enforce Peace. "If we cannot prevent these contests government is a failure, mentality amiss, and barbarism supreme. I welcome the movement begun by your league and shall be glad to do all I can to promote the accomplishment of its purposes, and I hope it will be signally successful."

The foregoing is a sample of a large number of letters received by Mr. Taft recently. These letters show that all sections of the country are thinking of the future in terms of world-statesmanship. Letters from members of both Houses of Congress in particular show that these gentlemen not only are in accord with their constituents in the matter of preventing wars in future by the combined economic and military force of a group of world powers but that they are also willing to do all they can to bring about such a league. Here are some more of the letters from Western Congressmen:

"I am heartily in favor of the purposes and proposals of your League," writes Senator Francis E. Warren, of Wyoming.

"The League to Enforce Peace is engaged in one of the greatest movements for the uplift of mankind since the beginning of civilization," writes Senator Henry L. Myers, of Montana. "The terrible war in Europe should make us realize that it is imperatively necessary that there should be some tribunal created to enforce peace," writes Senator John F. Shafroth, of Colorado.

Harry E. Hull, Representative from the Second District, of Iowa, writes as follows: "I am heartily in favor of the action of the League and shall be glad to lend my influence in any way to the furtherance of the cause which it represents."

John J. Esch, Representative from the Seventh District of Wisconsin, writes: "Forms of government have not been able of themselves to insure the peace of the world. We can hasten such peace by urging upon the leading nations the adoption of the plan proposed by the League to Enforce Peace."

"I am in entire sympathy with the object sought to be accomplished by the League to Enforce Peace," writes George M. Young, Representative

"GODS COUNTRY AND THE WOMAN" HERE TONIGHT

"God's Country and The Woman" is at the Globe tonight.

Far away, in the timberlands of the North, where the purity of woman is placed above all else, lived Josephine Adare, a kind, honest soul, whose face plainly bore an expression of deep sorrow and anxiety. Up to this—God's own country—came a man, Philip Weyman, to spend a year in that region.

The man meets the woman and falls in love with her. He begs her to confide in him her great sorrow, which he sees she is constantly thinking of, but she tells him that she may not do so. Seeing that he is persistent, and really anxious to help her, she asks him if he would be willing to follow her wherever she goes, doing whatever she asks of him, asking no questions, and with the hope of no reward but his undying gratitude. Owing to his great love for her, he consents, knowing that he will be working for a just cause. Through the long, bitter Northern winter, he travels with her, knowing neither where he is going nor what he is going to do. To aid her plans they are married, but it is a marriage in name only. She then takes him to the home of her father, John Adare, a rugged woodsman, where she tells him to pose as the father of a baby which she shows him. For a moment his faith in her wavers when he sees the child, but his manhood conquers and he determines to stand by his promise. Through many tense situations Philip remains true. The play leads on to a strong, thrilling end, one of the best pieces to be seen here this year.

Ting-a-Ling-Ling—

Probably at least a hundred times the Democrat today has answered calls for election returns, from people of Albany and vicinity, anxious to know the result. It has kept the force in the office on the jump. Starting to write or talk to some one in the office, ting-a-ling-ling have gone the phones until there has been almost a continuous ring, making one dizzy responding; but this office is as accommodating as a man running for office and is glad of the opportunity of serving its subscribers in this or any other way, for a good night's sleep will take the buzz out of our heads.

BACK IN MINN.

Milking Cows on Sunday Starts an Awful Row on Monday.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 8.—Ever since Monday there has been a terrible awful row in Minnesota University's agricultural school over milking Prof. T. L. Haeckler's ten thoroughbred Jersey cows on Sunday.

Desk farmers returning to the land via the sheepskin, balked at doing it. One of them said he came to the college to learn to be a better Christian. But the cows must be milked and the authorities have been asked to decide the wrangle once and for all by making a flat rule covering the point.

Miss Davis' Election—

The election of Miss Velma Davis to the office of county recorder, is wonderfully pleasing to her host of friends. Peculiarly fitted for the position, just the kind of a position for a woman, especially of Miss Davis' ability, her election is satisfactory to people generally, even to those who did not vote for her. Miss Davis was nominated by her name being written in on the ballots, not being an active candidate for the office, and only consenting to run after the urgent request of many friends regardless of party, and their promise to give her their best support.

FINE PLAY AT THE ROLFE THEATRE TONIGHT

"The Evil Thereof," a thrilling drama of modern life by the noted playwrights, Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf, at the Rolfe tonight, paints the relentless pursuit of the almighty dollar in such true and bold colors that the photoplay will electrify the public with its startling realism and uncompromising fidelity to life. This extraordinary screen play is designed to depict the human tragedies and despairs that exist in the background of life, and that are pressed into every dollar bill. The progress of the photoplay in a remarkably novel manner delineates the shattered loves, the broken hearts, the many crimes that are the real cost of money. This notable production of the Famous Players Film Company on the Paramount Program is certain to leave a lasting and inspiring impression.

EUGENE TO HAVE MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK

Register—The Philharmonic society expects Madame Ernestine Schumann-Heink to sing in Eugene on the night of November 23, according to R. H. Lyman, dean of the school of music at the University. At the Philharmonic meeting Monday night some 300 subscribed tickets were reported, and a wire was sent to Miss Lois Steers, Mme. Schumann-Heink's manager in the northwest. A reply is expected at once.

"I think Miss Steers will regard the outlook as very favorable," said Mr. Lyman. "The subscription is good, when you consider that we were only asking about the two dollar seats, and that our canvass was made just before election."

"That is the only place large enough to accommodate the crowd," he stated. "Besides that, Mme. Schumann-Heink's prices are so high this year that if we held the concert in a smaller building we would have to charge up to three dollars for seats."
