TURKEY TROT

Market Wants Only First Class Turkeys This Season for the High Prices.

The following is from the Review of Roseburg, the turkey center of the Northwest, if not the coast:

For fear that many of the Douglas county poultry raisers will kill their young stock for the Thanksgiving market, a number of non-resident commission firms have written letters to the local buyers warning them against purchasing anything but first class birds. The prices for turkeys will be somewhat higher this year than previously, and the commission merchants of the larger and more important cities of the west will handle only superior stock. In a letter received here a San Francisco commission merchant said: "We want only first class birds this year, and the poorer qualities cannot be handled at any price. Young birds which are not yet in condition for the market should be held until later in the season to insure adequate returns to the raisers."

LUMBER BUSINESS HAS BIG PROBLEM TO SOLVE

Decision of Federal Court of Great Importance in Development of Business.

Portland, Nov. 21.—"Whether we like it or not, the day is here in which the lumbermen must keep closely in touch with congress and the various departments at Washington. If we wait in each case until something injurious to our interests has occurred, we will have little or no chance to rectify mistakes. If we cooperate fully and freely with the Washington officials at all times, the chances are very much less detrimental measures and policies will be adopted without our having a chance to give them consideration. This has been strikingly exemplified in the development of recent months."

Cooperation, not only with other manufacturers, but with the governmental authorities as well, was thus advocated by President R. H. Downman, of New Orleans, of the National Lumber Manufacturers before western lumbermen today. With other eastern and southern lumbermen, leaders in the lumber manufacturing regions east of the Rockies, he came west to ask for suggestions from western manufacturers, for the carrying forward of the new national plan for the promotion of the lumber industry, through advertising and special work toward giving better service to the consumers, of the nation's forest products, and to tell the success of the work already done.

Following a preliminary investigation covering a year, the Interstate Commerce commission last July held in Chicago a general hearing upon the entire question of the classification of forest products, throughout the United States. Briefs by counsel will be filed with the commission during November. It is expected that oral arguments will be made in December, and a final decision announced by the commission some time in 1917.

For the first time in history, every branch of the lumber manufacturing industry presented a unanimous front upon a traffic question, and there is no question but that the outcome of the case will be much more favorable to the industry than if it had been handled without the direction and assistance of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association.

"The lumber industry has presented its first big case to the Federal Trade Commission also through the National association and its decision, which may now be expected any time, should set a precedent for dealing with all industries founded upon natural resources. If the commission finds, as the overwhelming evidence will compel it to find, that there is no "Trust" detrimental to the consumer among the lumber manufacturers, but that on the contrary both the industry and the public and the forests of the future have suffered from the results of cut-throat competition in the manufacture and sale of lumber, and that only through legalized cooperation can the rational use and conservation of our timber resources be brought about, a new policy of tremendous value and importance will have been instituted by the government.

"The Federal Trade Commission, the Forest Service and the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce are working together to solve problems in the production and distribution of lumber. The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce has not sufficient funds, so it is proposed that in cooperation with the National Lumber Manufacturers' association, six men be sent to Europe as soon as possible to furnish prompt and reliable information upon the character and extent and demand for American lumber immediately after the close of the war. The bulk of the money for this investigation will have to be furnished by the lumbermen, if it is made, but there is no question that the lumbermen should rise to this opportunity to extend their business."

Banquet Postponed—The banquet of the Epworth League arranged for Wednesday evening of this week, on account of the death of Inez Lemke has been postponed.

"When I was a young man"---

Said a father the other day in our store

"I paid big money for clothes and got ill-fitting, poorly tailored "hand-me-downs"—as they were called.

"And now for $20 you can fit my boy in a suit that looks like Fifth Avenue, New York. How is it?"

And then we reminded him that the same sort of care and thought and skill that had transformed the one-horse chaise into the racing car of to-day, had made the makeshift, ready-made clothes of the past into the splendid shapely garments of the present.
