DIFFERENT BRAINS.In the December American Magazine Sid says:

"In their mental operations I see about me all the time two groups of men—the mosquito fleet and the elephant brigade. The mosquito boys think quickly, and dart to conclusions like lightning. You will get an opinion out of them instantly that will be superior to any they will be able to produce after consideration. The elephant boys take more time. They move slowly. They like to think things over. Ask them for an opinion, and they will do better if they meditate."

"There is no special choice between these two groups. In each group there are quantities of men of great ability. I can at this moment think of two wonderful presidents of the United States—one a mosquito and the other an elephant."

As between men and women, it can be said in general that women are of the mosquito type. They pride themselves on their instinct for quick judgment. Men call it intuition. The 'bright' boy at school is usually of the mosquito type. His intellectual performances are rapid and showy. He can or may not go on and succeed—but if he does make good he won't get any particular credit for it from his schoolmates, simply because they 'always knew he was smart.' It takes a successful elephant to go back to his class reunion and stir up enthusiasm. Nobody expected much of him, and consequently everybody is prepared to applaud his achievements."

"It is amusing to watch these two kinds of men meet. The mosquitoes bother the elephants, and the elephants bother the mosquitoes. In games, especially, the irritation between the two reaches its height. If it is cards, the mosquito, with his leaping mind, knows in a second what he wants to do, while the elephant has to wait for his inspiration. Some games are better adapted to one of these groups than the other. Take chess, for example—an admirable game for the elephant type of mind. There is a game which two elephants can sit down and enjoy for a week at a stretch."

"The worst thing that can happen a man is to think himself an elephant when he is a mosquito, or a mosquito when he is an elephant. Some of the most terrible misfits in the world are misplaced elephants and misplaced mosquitoes. For example, a mosquito and an elephant can go into law practice together and supplement each other's talents beautifully. But the elephant had better keep out of court, where so much nimbleness is required."

"Another point is that the mosquitoes ought never to tease the elephants to try to take mosquito-like speed. Neither should the elephants try to take on elephantine deliberation. It can't be done. Let every man work according to his own instinct. The minute he begins to impersonate somebody else he loses himself, and his judgments and decisions are of less value."

"As a final observation, it may be well to record the fact that both classes of men are entirely satisfied with their equipment. The mosquitoes think there is nothing so greatly to be desired as agility and the elephants pride themselves on their deliberation, which is, I suppose, as it should be—for, without self-appreciation, man would surely perish."

FATIGUE ANTIDOTE.

There are people who use their heads so much that they become all clogged up, until there is just about one thing in them. An eastern writer very aptly tells how to proceed in such a case:

"Now everyone who has tended a furnace knows that if he were to keep on burning coal without ever shaking down the refuse, he would soon have a bed of clinkers, and the fire would go out. Your whole body, brain and brawn, is built on the furnace principle. If you keep on using your hands or your head for a long time at a stretch, clinkers begin to accumulate—only we call them 'waste products' in this case—and your fire flickers and burns low. That is fatigue."

"It is the business of the blood to keep these waste products cleared out. Any single drop of blood makes the rounds of your body in less than thirty seconds, picking up infinitesimal clinkers on 'the fly' and whizzing them to the organs of excretion, kidneys and lungs, where it discharges them."

"If the blood were only able to sweep out these waste products as fast as they are formed, we would never be tired. But, instead, they accumulate, and soon we have muscular or nervous fatigue. The latter comes more quickly because the nerve cells are more susceptible than the muscles."

MISFITS

The high cost of living no longer has any terrors for the editor of this column. It has just been discovered that the much abused horse-chestnut, of which Misfits has two very prolific trees, can be utilized for food, and this is being done extensively in Germany. They have learned how to take the bitter nut. The nuts are composed of 42 per cent starch, 5 per cent albuminous matter, 2.5 per cent oil, 9 per cent saccharine matter, 1.5 per cent mineral, and 40 per cent water.

All over the world waste problems are being solved. The inclination is to save everything possible and use it for something.

Getting out a newspaper would be an easy matter if the reporter could write as fast as the movie star.

Russia will now be in its elements, with a winter that will make the Germans take notice. That's one weapon it's hard to meet.

The people backed Mr. Wilson. The vote shows it.

but a fact.

One of the secrets of success in business is accommodation. It is an immense asset. The following pretty incident impresses the fact on us. It is about Geo. C. Bolt, at the head of the finest hotel in the world, the Waldorf-Astoria, taken from an American magazine article:

"A surprising thing is the number of times Bolt is consulted in the course of a week, on matters having nothing to do with a hotel."

"One night, a woman living in a fashionable part of New York called Bolt on the telephone and told him of the terrible plight she was in. She was in the midst of giving a dinner party. A number of guests had started up-stairs in her private elevator, and the elevator had got stuck between the two floors. Naturally there was much woe and excitement. And there were no elevator firms to be reached by telephone at such an hour."

"I've heard you spoken of as the most accommodating person in New York," she said to Bolt. "Can't you help us out of our trouble?"

"Bolt sent for one of his mechanical experts, rushed him to the scene in a taxicab, and in a little while all was well again with the dinner party."

His Dastardly CRIME Confessed

If ever there was a photoplay which should be seen by all young men and young women, that play is "Where Are My Children?" the unusual drama on the subject of birth control which recently created a sensation on Broadway, New York. In the family of the District Attorney, an unusually strong character played by that eminent actor,

Tyrone Power

Is his brother-in-law who betrays the housekeeper's young daughter. He confesses to his sister who sends them to a fashionable physician. The district attorney prosecutes the doctor for criminal operations, and learns that both his wife and her brother are guilty as the doctor. One of many daring situations which caused this great picture to be hailed as a necessary presentation of an ancient evil by press, pulpit and clergy. Produced by that genius of the films

LOIS WEBER

Who produced "Hypocrites," "Jewel," and "Scandal."
