Y. M. C. A. WILL HOLD OPEN DOORS NEW YEARS

On New Year's Day, next Monday, the Y. M. C. A. will, according to custom, hold open doors during the afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock, and everybody in Albany will be welcome to the rooms of the Association. In the early afternoon there will be music of different kinds, at 4 o'clock a volley-hall game, from 7:30 to 8:30 o'clock music by the popular high school orchestra, followed by singing by the crowd.

The Y. M. C. A. has just received a new boiler for the heating plant.

greatly needed, one increasing the heating capacity over a hundred per cent, and the Barker Hardware Co. is setting it up. The installation at this time is due to A. C. Schmitt, one of the Y. M. C. A.'s best friends.

BILLY MILLER AT OAKLAND

The Tribune is in receipt of a postal card from J. W. Miller, of Shelburn, Cal., under date of Dec. 24. Mr. Miller states that his father-in-law, Geo. Gibbons, also of Shelburn, has suffered a stroke of paralysis in his left side. Mr. Gibbons is in Providence Hospital at Oakland and will remain there for a few days. He is very anxious to return home.—Tribune.

J. R. Cartwright came down from Harrisburg this morning.

CITY NEWS

Monson at Banquet—

C. L. Monson, of this city, was in Portland last night, where he attended the annual banquet of the employees of the Pacific Paper Co., at the Hotel Multnomah. There were 41 present.

At Teachers' Institute—

The Oregonian this morning gives a group of prominent educators, at the convention of teachers of Oregon. Among them is a good one of Albany's able superintendent, Prof. Botticher.

Fooled Their Friends—

Harold Waggoner and Miss Christine Lenhart, of Eugene, were married in Portland three months ago, but the fact was not learned until yesterday, when it was formally announced at a party. Mr. Waggoner is a mechanic and Mrs. Waggoner was a waitress at the Smeede. The groom is a son of Geo. H. Waggoner, former city engineer of Eugene, and a grandson of the late Geo. Waggoner, of Lebanon.

On Way to Albany—

The remains of Mrs. Longbottom are on their way from Knoxville, Tenn., to Albany for burial. On account of the uncertainty of trains from the east it is not known just when the body will arrive, or when funeral services will be held here; but probably on Sunday. Accompanying the remains are Burney Longbottom, of Seattle, who went East immediately upon news of his mother's serious illness.

Saturday Market—

Ladies of the Christian Church will hold a Saturday Market tomorrow afternoon at the Hamilton Store.

Engineer Ill—

John F. McQuaid, known as Curley, a popular engineer on the Southern Pacific running thru Albany for many years, is reported seriously ill at the home of his daughter in Woodburn.

Family Band Here—

Last fall there was a family band consisting of a man, his wife and nine children, who gave performances on the street, taking up a collection. They were here several days. The band is again in the valley, arriving here yesterday from Eugene, where they played for a week to street audiences, and will now give their street concerts again.

Stuarts Have Girl—

An eight-pound baby girl was born last night to Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Stuart.

Weather Report—

Yesterday's temperature ranged between 23 and 32 degrees. The river fell to 4.6 feet.

Marion Co. Court—

Judge Kelly went to Salem this morning to hear motions and demurrers preliminary to the January term of the Circuit Court.

Attending Presbytery—

Dr. W. P. White went to Portland this morning to attend the meeting of the Oregon Presbytery of the United Presbyterian church. Dr. White is Superintendent of Missions of the Presbytery.

Attending Cheese Convention—

F. C. Pate, manager of the Albany Cheese Factory, went to Salem this morning to attend a session of the Marion County Cheesemakers' Convention, which opened yesterday.

Elks to Dance—

Invitations are out for the New Year's night dance to be given by the Elks in their temple at First and Lyon streets. Elks and their families are invited. For those not caring to dance card tables and other amusements will be provided.

Three Big Bible Students—

During the early part of 1917 three great Bible students will give a series of Bible addresses at this city, some in the shape of evangelistic services. They will be Dr. Matthews, of the First Presbyterian church of Seattle, Dr. W. B. Hinson, Baptist, of Portland, and Dr. Gaebelein, who has been here twice, of New York.

A Good Present—

Rev. and Mrs. Diven think that a set of Austrian China dishes makes a very fine Christmas present. This was the present the Grace Presbyterian church gave to their pastor and wife.

Grange No. 10 Social—

A community social will be held tonight at Grange Hall No. 10, by the ladies of that community, one for all. It is a penny affair and everybody will be welcome. Eight o'clock is the hour for beginning.

Arrived From East—

Mrs. Kent and Master John Kent, wife and son of Prof. Kent of Albany College, who reached Portland from the East Wednesday night are spending the day in Albany. John will re-

SCIO MAN KILLED BY FALLING SNAG

D. W. Beougher, Father of 12 Children, Meets Sudden Death Yesterday.

Scio, Ore., Dec. 29.—D. W. Beougher, aged 56, was killed yesterday on a farm seven miles east of here when a dead snag fell on him, striking his head. Details of the accident are lacking. Dr. A. G. Prill was called, but it was too late. He leaves a wife and 12 children.

Coroner Fortmiller, of Albany, was notified this morning, but decided no inquest was necessary.

LEBANON PRODIGY

Carl Landstrom, the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Landstrom, surprised and pleased the large audience at the Presbyterian Christmas exercises Tuesday afternoon by his remarkable skill in a violin solo, several pages of music being played without an error and with clearness and sweetness of tone unusual in so young a performer. Carl has studied less than a year and his rapid progress shows unmistakable talent.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COM. MAKES IMPORTANT DECISION

At Portland yesterday the interstate commerce commission rendered a decision in the matter of lumber rates, in the case of the Inman-Paulus Co., against the S. P., holding that rates on fir and hemlock lumber and lath in straight or mixed carloads from Portland, Or., to San Francisco, Cal., San Francisco Bay points and points on the defendant's line north thereof to and including Marysville, Cal., unduly prejudicial to the extent that they exceed rates contemporaneously in effect from Willamette Valley points and from points on the defendant's Tillamook-Portland, Or., branch to the same destinations.

"Traffic from Portland east is more highly competitive than to the south," says the commission's decision, "and the first point south to which rates from Portland and the Willamette Valley should be the same may properly be more distant than the first point east of Portland. We are of the opinion that rates south of Marysville, however, should not exceed rates from the Willamette Valley."

James G. Wilson represented the Portland mills. New rates in accordance with the decision were ordered established on or before March 15.

OREGONIAN CONTRASTS OR. AND SOUTHERN NEIGHBOR

Enterprise—

J. Numan, an old newspaper man of Oregon, was in Hubbard this week from Portland.

He was in California lately and considers Oregon—any part of it—far pleasanter to live in than even the most favored portions of the Golden State.

"In San Francisco," he said, "I found a foreign city in place of the American metropolis destroyed by earthquake and fire ten years ago. Of course they have lots of bright days there, but the raw breezes from the ocean drive the families across to the East side of the bay."

"Everybody down there is in constant dread of the moment when the concrete buildings will begin tumbling down on them, and this dread of earthquake goes far to offset the bright weather, even on the Oakland side."

"We may have drawbacks here in the Willamette Valley, but we have no booze to contend with and no earthquakes to fear. Besides, the Oregon population is largely American and that goes a long way to make existence enjoyable."

J. F. Potter and W. C. Burckoff, of Mill City, are in the city on business.

H. A. Clodfelter, of Portland, is in the city on Studebaker business.

W. Richardson, of Stayton, is an Albany visitor.

E. R. Barber arrived in the city last night from Roseburg.

Ed. F. Bailey went to Portland last night to remain over New Year's. He will attend the meeting of the Alumni Council of the University of Oregon.

MAE MARSH PLAYS PART OF WILD GIRL

A legend of the Sierras, according to which there was once discovered in the mountains a girl who, as far as she could remember had never come in contact with other humans, is the basis for the offering, "The Wild Girl of the Sierras" at the Globe today.

In the beginning we see the girl, playing about with wild animals and delighting in her friendship with the bears, the rabbits and the birds. She wears a tunic made of feathers and takes her afternoon nap gracefully stretched on the limb of a tree. Into this fairyland of the girl there comes one day a stranger. The stranger loves to shoot, and he mistakes the girl for some sort of animal and loses no time in firing at her.

The result of this incident is that the girl becomes the companion of humans. She is unable to talk their language, but by making signs she and the other three get along pretty well. The boy is rich and his companions are anxious to sell him a mine whose value is nil. He refuses to buy, even after the woman who loves the gambler makes love to him. The girl, one learns, is the daughter of this gambler, but he never becomes aware of the fact. The visualized memories which come to her make this known to the spectator. The boy's money belt is saved by the girl and in the closing scene the boy and the girl walk off toward the distant town, presumably, for each has a deep affection for the other.

Mae Marsh does some excellent acting as the girl. When she first sees the strange beings who take her captive, she is for all the world like a frightened bird. Her performance throughout is noteworthy for the finish of her expression. Robert Harrison is good as the boy and the same may be said of Wilfred Lucas as the gambler, Olga Grey is also pleasingly prominent in the picture.
