WE NEED NERVE

Secretary of Commerce Redfield says:

We long ago endured the business shock the war brought with it. For many months we have been passing through a period of stimulation brought by the war. This seems to be closing, and we are apparently about to enter upon the inevitable time of readjustment to a peace basis.

The prospect of peace seems to bring with it only fear to many in the business world. We are doing well now, say they, but what is to happen? Since it is not known precisely what is to happen, ghosts are conjured up and given form and power, and men worry over the terrible possibilities from these creatures of their own creation. What is wanted is not so much nerves as nerve, not fear, but foresight, not cowardice, but courage. Least among all the peoples of the world have we cause for dread. "Our withers are unwrung"; our coffers are full; our sons survive. There will be readjustments, possibly different ones, but never was nation in such shape to face them fearlessly as we are today. If the problems prove difficult, the greater need for sanity of mind and clearness of thought about them. They are not to be dealt with better, but worse, if we are afraid of them. One need not be heedless because he is calm. A quiet mind is not an indication of weakness or ignorance. Worry and fear will not make the facts better, but merely weaken our power to deal with them. How we shall deal with them depends chiefly on ourselves. Have we used the months of prosperity well? Are our debts paid? Is depreciation marked off? Are fixed assets marked down to real values? Has the time of prosperity been utilized to get rid of old equipment? Are we as certain of the fact that our methods are good as we are that they will need to be good? Do we clearly understand what it costs us to make goods and to do business? Have we clear knowledge of our overhead charges and of how to deal with them? Have we used the days of sunshine to prepare for the time when it may rain? If we have done so, we may approach the contest like a trained athlete, fearless of difficulties, counting them worthy of the steel.

SIMPLE THING

Pendleton E. O. President Wilson's peace note to the powers was the essence of simplicity. He merely pointed out that the war imperils the interests of neutral countries and ask the nations to define the conditions on which they would consent peace.

It is not difficult for anyone to understand such a request. There is no reason why partisans on either side should take offense, for the war was neither pro-ally nor pro-German. Then why should there be any question as to the sense of the view of move? Why should Senator Lodge grow so vehement and denounce Ambassador Burnstorff because the ambassador expressed approval of the note? Why should not all ambassadors express such approval; is peace not a worthy end?

FOOTBALL RECORD

The record of the recent U. O. Pennsylvania game shows that Oregon was superior to Pennsylvania in everything but forward passes. Pennsylvania's specialty. Penn made nine complete forward passes out of 25 tries. Ten were incomplete and six were intercepted by Oregon. Oregon made two complete ones, five incomplete ones and had two interceptions. Penn was penalized 90 yards; Oregon 37 yards.

PROFITS

The present attack on the president will react with such force as to make some of the hammer wielders look like jellyfish.

The country is infested with men who can't see beyond the end of a political nose.

President Wilson is undoubtedly on the inside in reference to peace talk and knows pretty well what he is doing.

In the first place his note was simply a friendly note showing the belligerents that neutral countries have rights that should be respected, and that war is bad anyway.

N. B. politicians, hoping to make capital for four years hence, jump on every straw's back that floats past.

Whiskey is the name of a town down near Hubbard. It has a high school. An item in a Hubbard paper recently had for a head: "Whiskey High School. Probably the soberest people in the world live there, but the name does burn. If we were a Whiskey youngster we'd hate to have to tell people we were born in Whiskey."

Too Old to Learn

"But couldn't you learn to love me," he pleaded.

"I don't think I could, Frank," she replied.

He stood erect, then quickly reached for his hat. "It is as I feared—you are too old to learn."—Everybody's.

Business Aid

"I am truly thankful that my nose is bent, that my eyes are crooked, that I am bald, and that I have buck teeth; for people never forget my face, and that helps me in my business."—Life.

Independence Monitor Jingles

Howdy, nineteen hundred and seventeen.

We're mighty glad you're here. While 1916 was an eventful time, it was a bloody one. We fear; Men across the great big pond Have met their end defying. And in this place, It won't erase Some women have been dying.

A new mayor sits upon our throne With one or two new fathers. This bunch for a year at least, Will handle all our brothers: Being all well-tempered men, And not much used to fussing. They will stand On every hand A goodly share of cussing.

New Year's resolutions have been made. And already have been broken. Men are smoking like a stove And swear words daily spoken; But Oregon by the ballot box Has stopped the glasses clinking. So all can say From New Year's Day, "I can swear off on drinking."
