Rae Tanzer and "Oliver Osborne" Face Each Other in Court

New York, Jan. 9.—(By United Press)—Important pages in a strange romance as Cupid ever had a hand in are scheduled to be written on the dusty records of Federal Court here today when tiny Rae Tanzer, former District Attorney James W. Osborne and the mysterious "Oliver Osborne" Wax come face to face.

Rae Tanzer, a New York young woman who looks like a coy little girl, claims James W. Osborne, a married man of wealth, and social standing, and former district attorney of New York, flitted with her on the 72nd street subway platform a few years ago, later made violent love to her and promised to marry her. To back up her statement Miss Tanzer sued James W. Osborne for $50,000 for breach of promise.

James W. Osborne throughout has maintained that he never saw or heard of Rae Tanzer until he was served with the papers in the breach of promise suit. At all the trials of the case he has asserted that a mysterious stranger approached him before the suit was filed and admitted posing to Miss Tanzer as James W. Osborne. The mysterious man never has been produced in court, however; and while Osborne and his attorneys have spent a fortune scouring the country for a trace of the man, Miss Tanzer repeatedly has positively identified James W. Osborne as her "Oliver."

Miss Tanzer's assertions, backed by the words and deeds of her attorneys, Slade & Slade, have resulted in her indictment for perjury. The court scene today shows the beginning of the second trial of Miss Tanzer on the charge.

A LITTLE YELLOW CAR FROM SAN FRANCISCO

A little yellow car, a Ford, rushed into town yesterday afternoon, attracting some attention because covered with mud, indicating some travel. The owner was a young man named Z. W. Gore, traveling for a San Francisco house. He had come all the way from the metropolis, dodging the Siskiyou, going over to Klamath Falls, and up the east side and down the Columbia Highway. He said the travelling the other side of the mountains was fierce, and there is some mud now in this valley. He left back for Portland, before returning to San Francisco. His trip demonstrates the fact that a man can travel any time of the year in this country if willing to fight mud.
