MARVELOUS AGE

Developments daily speak of the marvelous age in which we live. Few appreciate the fact that just now there is a golden era of invention in progress. Here is a story and comment that suggest wonderful things in the future as well as the marvels of today.
A "wireless dance" was given recently at the home of Theodore E. Gaty at Morristown, N. J. The tunes all came from a phonograph on Manhattan Island, 40 miles away, and they came by the air route. They were picked out of the ether by a marvelous device which not only caught the sounds but multiplied them several hundred times. Music has often been transmitted by wireless but it has been necessary to hold a special wireless receiver to the ear to hear it. In this case the music was distinctly audible all over the house, and the dancers had no difficulty in keeping step to it. It was said to be louder than the original music as it came from the phonograph.
This is one of the most striking triumphs of the new science of wireless telephony. The instruments used are said to be within the reach of amateurs, and the possibilities thus opened up are surprising. A radio engineer who participated in the Morristown experiment announces that with the amplifiers now available music can be transmitted 200 miles. "It would be just as easy," he declares, "to transmit the music of an entire opera from the Metropolitan opera house as to transmit this phonograph music. It would only be necessary to have the sending apparatus within range of the voices in the Metropolitan."
May we not expect to see exactly such a development in the future—the best music played and sung by great artists, received by wireless either by public gatherings or by families at home? An opera thus transmitted would be accessible to anybody within the 200-mile radius who had a proper receiver. Thus there might conceivably be a grand opera audience of many hundred thousand people. Imagine a million music-lovers hearing Caruso sing—not "canned" songs, but the living song as it came from his throat.

WATCH THE LEGISLATURE

They wanted your votes a little while ago. They talked to you very earnestly about their devotion to commonweal, and crucial necessity of electing them rather than the other fellows, says the Saturday Evening Post.
Well, there they are now—a Senate and a House of Representatives—with a short session before them, in which some business of real importance will press for consideration.
Will they go at it with an eye to the commonweal and a sense of high trust with which you have vested them? Will they try to be economical of time and money? Will they subordinate politics of personal, factional, partisan and grand-stand sorts to genuine and urgent public business? Watch them, with their campaign promises to retrench and not create new offices or impose new burdens fresh in mind. Usually you do not watch them. They function in a twilight, quite often of a disappointing character. Watch them this time. See how they expedite or delay important business; what their attitude is toward economical handling of your money; how much they give to their own purely selfish affair of jockeying for political advantage.
We hope your watching will be pleasantly rewarded. But if they disappoint you, know it and remember it.

Every nickel or dime spent for Hand Made or an Albany Special Cigar means a bigger industry for Albany.

MISFITS

The unpardonable crime has been learned: stealing eggs.
How times have changed. When Misfits was a boy that was merely a pastime.
An egg boiled in an old tin can out in the woods tasted mighty good.
Paying political debts with the money of the people is as frenzied finance as that of Wall Street, only on a small scale.
Down at Salem
Sing a song of sus-pense—
Pockets full of rye;
More than half the members
Like it same as I.
When the talkfest opens
Old Barleycorn will sing,
"Won't it be a lovely dish
When 'H2O' is king?"
—F. B. D.

While some of the members of the legislature are friends of John Barleycorn they have learned that the people are against the old cuss, the enemy of the home and civilization, and they are whacking him to the limit.
Wherever there is booze crooked methods may be expected. It breeds zigzag lines physically and morally.
Germans say that America's interests during peace are entirely selfish. Probably correct. The interests of the countries of Europe are selfish whether in peace or war.
Anyway Mr. Hog is taking considerable of a hand in manipulating things in the world.

Stup'ndous Greatness

Guard:
"Have we a great team?" asked President Campbell.
"Ye-a," roared 2500 students and townsmen who crowded the armory yesterday afternoon to celebrate the victory of the University of Oregon football team over the eleven from the University of Pennsylvania at Pasadena New Year's day.
"Have we a great University?" continued the president.
"Ye-a," responded the students, as the bugles blared.
"Have we a great state?"
"Ye-a."
"Have we a great city, Eugene?"
"Ye-a-a."
It was indeed a great rally.

Just now the Cheops of Egypt would look like a horse block if set down in Eugene.

ROMANCE IN CHINESE RESTAURANT ENOS WELL

Journal:
A Chinese restaurant is not just the place you would expect to find a white girl's romance, but it is the unexpected that usually happens, and so it did with a little dark eyed girl who waits on the table at a cafe owned, managed and cooked for by Chinese. It is in the down-town section so that business men, professional men, workers and idlers make up the patrons of the place, no better perhaps and no worse than the men who eat elsewhere, but the fact that it is a Chinese restaurant makes it a little harder for the girls than in some of the better class places where the girls must give a certain guarantee of good behavior in order to hold their positions.
The little dark-eyed girl found it that way and never could quite understand what to say to men who put questions to her concerning where she lived, when she was off duty, and all that, but somehow she managed not to tell them. She had been married when she was 14 and it hadn't turned out well so she took her boy and started out west from her old home town across the Mississippi. She worked in a florist's shop, herself not unlike some of the waxen lilies she handled, but her job played out and she had to have food for herself and boy so she took a job in a Chinese restaurant, where by day she carried soup, chow mein, chop suey and noodles, and by night she washed and sewed and tried to make their little rooms homelike, on a dollar a day. It wasn't easy to wash her little boy's face and send him to school in a rather thin suit when he needed a warmer one, and to have him come home to the lonely rooms to which she could not return until 11 o'clock at night, but the little dark-eyed woman had faith that everything would come out all right and it did.
One day when she hadn't been at the restaurant very long a young rancher, with the tan of eastern Oregon upon his face, drifted in and sat at her table. She hadn't been there long enough to know that men who usually talk to waitresses don't mean what they say, or sometimes mean a vast deal more than they say. In this case it was well that she didn't know, for she believed every word he said, and for a wonder, a very great big wonder, he meant every word.
That's all. The wedding is to be next week, and the little dark-eyed bride who has carried chop suey in the past will presently be making biscuits in her own kitchen, while the pale little boy who has had only the city pavement for a play ground is going to chase jackrabbits on a 200-acre ranch east of the mountains.
—By Ella McMunn.
