BLANCHE SWEET IN "PUBLIC OPINION"

Blanche Sweet, the brilliant Lasky star, who has established herself among the idols of the screen, was seen at the Globe last night, in the thrilling society drama "Public Opinion."

Blanche Sweet is one of the most interesting personalities before the theatre-going public. In each of the Lasky productions in which she has appeared, she is seen in a totally different role, and gives each one a different characterization. She has been seen as a rag mufferin, a member of the Russian royal household, a Swedish maid-of-all-work, and an anarchist, and now in "Public Opinion" she appears as a trained nurse on trial for murder.

How a sensational newspaper report prejudices the mind of the public against this young woman who is absolutely innocent of all wrong and how her whole future happiness is jeopardized by what is supposed to have been one false step, is shown in a gripping and entertaining manner. One of the unusual features of this striking photodrama, is the efforts of the spirit of the woman the nurse is supposed to have poisoned, direct the hand of justice towards the guilty person. Throughout the story until the murdered is finally forced to confess, the spirit of the dead woman tries to bring the guilty to justice. The play will be presented for the last time tonight.

ANTI-BOYCOTT BILL MAY BE INTRODUCED

Salem, Ore., Jan. 15.—An anti-picketing, anti-banner and anti-boycott measure, submitted by Thomas McCusker, of the Employers' Association, was put up to the Multnomah delegation for approval by Representative Kuhl, of Multnomah, at a special meeting of the delegation at noon today. It carries an emergency clause.

After considerable discussion, the delegation decided to take a day to think it over. Final decision is to be made at another meeting at noon tomorrow.

The measure is based on the present law prohibiting use of force or intimidation to prevent any person from continuing at work, or from accepting employment. It goes much further, however, by prohibiting picketing of any kind, peaceable or otherwise.

It makes it a misdemeanor, punishable by $50 to $500 fine, or by one month to six months imprisonment, or both, for any person, "by serving as a picket, or by stationing or maintaining pickets in front of, or in the vicinity of any store, factory, works or place of business or employment, or in front of or near the home of any person, or between the home of any person and his place of business or employment," to prevent or endeavor to prevent any person from working or accepting employment.

Further, the measure prohibits the display of "any banner, transparency or other device in front of, or in the vicinity of any store, factory, works or place of business or employment," and makes it a misdemeanor to boycott or attempt to boycott any person or business over any question of employment.

The word "boycott" does not appear in the measure, but it is unmistakably described and intended.

In presenting this measure to the delegation, Kuhl spoke of the present shipbuilding strike in Portland and the picketing attendant thereon and declared that there ought to be protection for any industry expending $20,000 a day in payrolls and meaning so much to the city and state.

"It is a matter," he said, "that concerns the business interests of Portland more than any other measure that could be brought before this delegation. If the delegation will stand behind me, I will introduce this bill myself. I'm fearless and courageous enough to vote my honest convictions and I think every member of this delegation should be the same. But I am not going to introduce it unless the delegation shows a disposition to be fair and to back me up."

The delegation approved the measure drawn by Attorney-General Brown to abolish publication of delinquent tax notices in the newspapers and to substitute therefore postal card notices to delinquents. The act carries an emergency clause.—Oregonian.

TWENTY "KIDDIES" ARE SEEN WITH DOROTHY GISH

The regular company of child screen players employed at the Triangle-Fine Arts studio was augmented to 20 for Dorothy Gish's new play, "The Little Schoolmarm," to be seen at the Globe Friday. To handle 20 active youngsters, some of them new to screen work, in difficult ensemble scenes is no light task, but it was precisely the thing that appealed most to the Franklin Brothers, co-directors of the production, who are famous for their work with children. They revelled in it, as the results make plain.

CITY NEWS

Wise as an Owl

If there is anything especially smart in the Democrat tonight the cause will be easily explained. A young owl, the embodiment of wisdom, was brought to the office this morning from Mongolianville, after killing several young pheasants. It is impossible to look at an owl without thinking.

A Hasbeen Hero

Fap Hayseed, of Heppner, passed thru the city for a visit at Corvallis. He will be remembered by some as a great football star at the O. A. C. 15 years ago, being on the team when it gave U. O. one of the worst lickings in its history.

Wants Much

The game commission wants $89,600 to run the business. It is doubtful if there is such a waste of the people's money by any other state commission, and it should be cut to the limit, if not eliminated.

Salary Raise Bill

Rep. Childs of this county has introduced a bill raising salary of state printer from $1800 to $2800, and for a secretary of the board at the same price. Why? Anyway it is some difference between the old graft income of $20,000 or $30,000 a year from the office.

Returned to Alaska

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Taylor and baby, born on Christmas day at this city, and Miss Lillie Taylor, left this afternoon for their home at Alaska, in their Ford, after spending a couple of months here the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Venable.

Weather Report

Yesterday's temperature ranged between 42 and 17 degrees. The river fell to 37 feet.

Butlers Take Trip

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Butler went to Salem this morning to attend the legislature with the Linn county delegation going down to boost for the Cascades highway from Lebanon across the range to Eastern Oregon. This afternoon they will go to Portland where Mr. Butler will attend a session of the Scottish Rites Masons.

Railroad Men

C. W. Meldrum, Asst. Gen. Passenger Agent of the Great Northern Ry. of Seattle, and Lee Tierney, Traveling Passenger Agent, of Portland, were in the city yesterday, leaving on the morning electric for Portland.

Died in Portland

Mrs. Eliza Roland, sister of J. M. Ralston, of this city, died in Portland on Tuesday, at the age of 74 years. She was the daughter of Jeremiah Ralston, founder of Lebanon. Mrs. Roland spent most of her life at Lebanon, a woman beloved for many splendid qualities of character. C. H. Ralston, of Lebanon, was another brother. The funeral was held in Portland today. On account of being in Los Angeles, J. M. Ralston was unable to be present.

From Crabtree

Geo. Garland and Tom Cooper, of Crabtree, were in the city yesterday on business. Mr. Cooper recently came from the Dakotas, where he lived for a number of years, and hence knew all about cold weather, as low as 52 degrees below zero.

Fined for Drunkenness

John Cathin this morning brought Leo Egan before Judge L. G. Lewelling on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. A fine of $10 and costs were imposed, and Egan was required to repair some damages that he had done to a residence in the city.

Miss Bryant Arrives

This noon a baby girl made her appearance in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Bryant, 426 East Fourth street. This makes the second child in the Bryant household, the first being a boy two and one-half years old. Mrs. Bryant is doing well, and the proud father is kept busy this afternoon receiving congratulations and passing the smokes to his friends.

Girls Serve Dogs

This morning after chapel, the girls of Albany College held another of their hot dog and sandwich feeds for the benefit of the Y. W. C. A. fund. Every week or so the girls serve eats to the men at a small stipend a throw to assist in the association work.

Bought Studebaker

W. A. Templeton, of Brownsville, yesterday purchased a Studebaker "four" automobile from the Albany Garage, and this afternoon R. M. Bond, cashier of the Albany State bank, drove home in a new Studebaker six-cylinder car.

Auto Men Banquet

Yesterday evening in the Hotel Albany dining room, the auto dealers of the city gathered at a social dinner. The affair was formal and tended to cultivate a better feeling between the various dealers and supply men of the city. Another meeting will be held in the near future at which an expert will be brought up from Portland to address the local dealers.

Report of Sale

Geo. H. Coshaw, executor of the estate of Sarah E. Coshaw, today filed a report of sale of real property for $3,500.

WALSH TELLS STORY OF BIG FOOTBALL GAME

George Walsh, handsome leading man in captivity, who will appear Friday at the Rolfe in William Fox's new photoplay which Otis Turner directed, "The Mediator," is a firm believer in the adage that everything worth doing is worth doing to the last ounce. Mr. Walsh himself is authority for the statement that a little quarterback on Georgetown University football team taught him the lesson, not in a classroom, but on the field where ten yard lines seem miles apart.

The score was nothing to nothing. Mr. Walsh was haliback. Time and again he hurled himself into the line for short gains. It seemed like bucking a stone wall. The fullback catapulted into the line with the same success, and so did the other half. End runs were stopped almost before they were started; and the only ray of sunshine was that the opposing team met the same treatment.

For one long half and twenty-five minutes of the second, it was a bitter struggle. Then the quarterback came to life. A man was injured, and time was taken out. Somebody worked a knee loose to good effect in the clinches and the quarterback grouped his men about him.

"You fellows make me sick," he growled at them. "Hit 'em harder. None of you has been killed yet. Get in there and die." So they went back at the game ready for the worst.

On the next play, the full took the ball and was stopped with only a short gain. But he wiggled forward half a foot. George Walsh got the ball next, and he made the usual gain; but he wiggled forward for the first down. The play was repeated.

Down the field went the team, not content with making a gain, but adding to that gain when all hope seemed lost. And when the dust of battle lifted, there was the Georgetown team right in the shadow of the opposition's goal-posts.

Walsh got the ball again. "Remember the inches," the quarterback cried, and George remembered them so well that he went stumbling forward, put all his strength into a last despairing effort, shook off the tackle and raced forward to a touchdown—and victory.

PREPARING TO WAGE WAR MORE VIGOROUSLY

London, Jan. 13.—Now that the shower of notes about peace is nearing its end, both sides are preparing to continue the war vigorously. The fall of Braila, Romania's greatest storehouse of grain and oil, seriously imperils Galatz, the strongest Rumanian fortress, ten miles further north, just at the bend of the Danube. It threatens the defensive line of the Sereth across the country from the Danube to the Carpathians, with Galatz, Namalosa and Fokshani as chief fortified points of support.

The collapse of this line in all probability would close definitely the Rumanian campaign, for it would seem folly for the Prussians to attempt a drive against Odessa or Kieff, not to speak of Moscow, which would extend their front hundreds of miles, weaken their communications and invite disaster in case of any great success by the Allies east or west. A continued invasion of Russia would be simply a wandering in the wilderness without definite object and the withdrawal would be a disastrous as Napoleon's.

At present the Russian lines are shortened considerably by the elimination of Wallachia from the map. Instead of having to defend the entire Transylvania frontier all the way to Orsova, on the Danube, and then back along the Bulgarian border to Varna, the front now cuts across Moldavia to Fokshani, Galatz and the mouth of the Danube, less than 200 miles, compared with more than 200 by the former circuitous route. This will relieve a very large part of Field Marshal von Mackensen's forces for use elsewhere, presumably against the allied force at Salonica.

Certain English newspapers of considerable influence for a long time have been advocating the abandonment of the Balkan expedition. They are the same newspapers which advocated and finally succeeded in forcing the withdrawal from Gallipoli. But there is this difference between the two cases. Whereas the attempt to conquer the Dardanelles and reach Constantinople by way of the straits was proved to be impossible except at a prohibitive cost in men and money, no one was injured by the withdrawal. Now it is not all impossible that the Allies, waiting at Salonica like Wellington at Torres Vedras, will have the opportunity sooner or later to dart out, crumple up the Bulgar-Turkish hordes, restore Serbia and march overland to Adrianople and Constantinople.

To abandon Salonica would work great injury to the best friends of the Allies in the east and those who have made the greatest sacrifices for them. It would render the re-establishment of Serbia, Montenegro and Rumania more remote. It would place the patriotic Greeks under Venizelos, who constitute two-thirds of the Greek nation, and who invite the Allies to land at Salonica, at the mercy of the small pro-Prussian royalist coterie at Athens, who would not hesitate to put to death all the supporters of the provisional government and inaugurate a reign of massacre and terror among their followers.
