WORKING FOR FUN

Mr. Henry Ford's statement that he manufactures automobiles for the fun of it will surprise few people, says the New York Tribune. To all appearances Mr. Ford gets a large amount of entertainment out of his business and no one would wish to deny him his amusement. Mr. Ford is interested in his fun. He is a social phenomenon. He seems to have a genius of passing the fun around. His employees are evidently getting their share of it. It is said that a multitude of users of Ford cars have been let in on the joke, and even the general public has found in Mr. Ford's career some occasions for innocent amusement.

However, Mr. Ford is not unique in doing his work for the fun of it. All who love their work, all whose daily tasks have not degenerated into the meaningless grind of wage slavery experience a like joke in their work. Thousands of people paint pictures, write books and make beautiful things for the sheer fun of doing it. Other thousands make bricks, sell cigars, fire boilers, build houses, wait on tables, run railroad trains and do all sorts of things, each one finding his own work the most interesting thing in the world, so fascinating indeed that he can hardly talk about anything but shop.

It is this element of interest which transforms labor into art, makes a good workman, and saves industry from mechanical drudgery. If all men could work for the fun of it there would be no labor problem. But men can hardly be expected to get much fun out of tasks in which they feel they are not getting a square deal; there is no fun in that labor in which men are not permitted to express something of themselves, no fun in that which offers them no hope of getting ahead.

It is easy for the prosperous and successful to get fun out of their work; it is natural that such persons should fail to understand why labor should be discontented. But few men can afford to work very long for fun and nothing else. The fun of the industrial game becomes a little forced when the suspicion grows that the cards are so stacked that one man always draws the "booby prize," while the best prizes always go to another. The big problem in modern civilization is to dispel this suspicion and find some more effective method for passing the fun around than untoward exhortation to men to be happy in the performance of profitless tasks.

MILLIONAIRE WITH HEART

There is a general impression that millionaires are heartless kinds of fellows, all selfishness, always oppressing the poor and exalting themselves. A good story is told of one of them who had a good heart, J. O. Armour, the well known meat packer of Chicago, who takes a great personal interest in his men. In an article written by Merle Crowell for the February American Magazine, this is said:

"J. O. takes an intimate interest in the daily life of his men away from the office. Subordinates in other cities do not escape him. He knows just how many children most of his branch managers have, where they are being educated and how they are getting along.

"His memory is prodigious. He asks question continuously and seems to retain everything he hears.

"When his men go on the pension roll on account of illness or old age, it often happens that their pensions are not large enough to pay medical bills or other extra expenses and support their families in comfort. In such cases 'J. O.' makes up a plentiful balance from his personal account—and there is only the instinct of the men to tell them whence comes the surplus. Usually when Mr. Armour hears of a new baby arriving in the family of one of his employees he replenishes the father's pocketbook with a suitable sized check. Incidentally, he has had more youngsters named after him than falls often to the lot of a presidential candidate."
