TRIBUTE TO CONGRESSMAN

A special day was taken in congress recently to pay the respects of the members for their departed fellow congressman, Samuel Tribble, little known outside the halls of congress. Here are some of the expressions and verses that appeared in different speeches:

A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches. And loving favor rather than silver or gold.

To thine own self be true, And it must follow, as the night the day, Thou canst not then be false to any man.

The heights by great men reached and kept Were not attained by sudden flight. But they, while their companions slept, Were toiling upward in the night.

He, the young and strong, who cherished No le longings for the strife, By the roadside fell and perished, Weary with the march of life.

To live in hearts we leave behind is not to die.

Our lives are songs; God writes the words, And we set them to music at pleasure; The song grows sad, or sweet, or glad, As we choose to fashion the measure.

A quiet haven where his shattered bark Harbors secure 'til the rough storm is past, Perhaps a passage overhung with clouds, But at its entrance a few leagues beyond, Opening to kinder skies and milder suns, And seas pacific as the soul that seeks them.

Heaven is not gained by a sudden bound; But we climb the ladder by which we rise From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies Round by round. There will be a place we know not where, And time we know not when, When God Divine in justice there, Will judge the deeds of men.

God does not send us strange flowers every year; When the spring winds blow o'er pleasant places, The same dear things lift up the same fair faces, The violet is here. It all comes back—the odor, grace and hue, Each sweet relation of its life repeated; It is the thing we knew. So after the death winter it will be; God will not put strange sights in heavenly places; The old love will look out from the old faces; Veilchen, I shall have thee!

There is no death, The stars go down to rise upon a fairer shore And bright in Heaven's jeweled crown,

They shine forevermore, And ever near us tho' unseen The nearer immortal spirit treads, For all the boundless universe is life, There are no dead.

ASK MOTHER

When in doubt consult your mother advises the Palatka (Fla.) News in The Editorial. That advice applies to children, generally, but it applies especially to girls. Your mother, young woman, has had the advantage of experience which you lack. She knows the ways of the world, which you do not know. You see things from your point of view. It is necessarily a narrow point of view. Your mother knows. She has gone by the way you are coming. Happy that mother who won and kept her daughter's confidences, who knows how important it is to listen sympathetically to her daughter's doing and plans. Happy the mother who has not driven her daughter away by speaking of the girlish notions as "silly" and "preposterous," or by scolding the girl's delinquencies. The bond between mother and daughter should never be broken. The bond of companionship between the two is a natural one. If it binds them together the daughter's problems become the mother's problems, and the solution will be a wise one.

"A son is a son 'till he gets a wife; a daughter is a daughter all the days of her life"—if the bond holds true. The old adage says: "A boy's best friend is his mother." That is true. But a mother is in a peculiar sense the best friend of a daughter. And the girl who forgets this is in danger of making a mistake in life. Ask your mother.

WISHTS

The pavement was covered with worms Sunday morning, driven out of the ground by a heavy rain, seeking refuge on the hard surface, only to be slaughtered by automobiles and the heat of the day.

How much like the great European war with men driven into the dirt of the trenches, only to be mashed by the juggernaut of modern war's hellish implements of destruction.

Speaking of war, if you wish to keep your mind in an agreeable shape don't read the details of trench life. It's enough to make the grey matter black. Sufficient to cover the face with clouds.

That's one thing our friend George Forgy couldn't laugh over.

Down at Portland for forty-five years Gottfried Keller has been sitting on mill stones cutting, cutting, cutting, like Sisyphus ever rolling the stone up the mountain, over and over again.

He says he likes it best: o' all things and sings at his work. After all most lives are merely a repetition. We get up, eat, work, study, perhaps play a little or be amused, and go to bed. Things run in a circle, and again and again the ends come together. This "old nut" has about made up his mind that it pays best to follow the system of Keller and smile as much as possible, and not worry over the monotony of life, for that's human experience. Complaining and fault finding are mighty poor mixtures for mending things. No two people do things alike, all different, and it is well to remember this when putting on the critic's cap. To change the subject, a good rule in life is to leave the old fashioned skunk alone. It is interesting to know though that the up-to-date skunk is a harmless fellow, and makes a pretty good pet, a rather pretty animal. Dr. Latourette and Dr. Eaton are to be married in Portland. Can any one guess which is the bride? Give the prodigal girl just as much of a chance as the prodigal son. It is better to lift than to knock.
