It was prmoptly flashed broadeast and came to all Europe as one of the greatest surprises of the war.  Quick Capture Surprise.  That the eity would fall sooner or later was generally excepted, but that the capture would come so soon surprised even the most sanguine British military experts. The Turks had been expected to make a stubborn stand on the river Diala, six miles away. Only a few days ago Major General Frederick B. Maurice, chief dictator of military operations at the British war office had predicted a haut battle. The idea was general that for two years the Turks had been biny constructing powerfut defenses to ward off the final British onslaught. Entente Capitals Jubilant.  All England was Jubiflant tonight, | secording to Lendon dispatches, and advices from the other entente capitals show that the spirit of triumph is fully shared therz.  The capture of figdad, it is felt, gocs a long way tow, rd reentablishing the badly impared British prestage in the near and far east. It wipes out the humiliating blot of Kut-el-Amara and obliterates much of the blackness the Dardanelles disaster left behind  To the Turks the reverse is one of the worst they have suffered in the war.  Severe Blow to Turka  It is expected to deal a telling blow to the morale of the Ottoman army and to the sultan's prestage among the Mohammedan world.  Bagdad has been in Turkish posses. sion since 1618, when Sultan. Marad IV wrester it from the Persians. Two centuries ago a desperate but futife effort to retake it was made by Shah Nadir. Bagdad represents, therefore. a preciots pase in Ottoman history The Mohammedans have given it the name Dar es Salam, which menat City of Salvation or Cacred Chy. |
