VIRGINIA PEARSON IN "THE BITTER TRUTH" TONIGHT

A theme of revenge, conceived in the bitterness of a moment of sorrow, keeping dominant throughout a long term of years, and finally spending its force only after it is about accomplished its purpose, lends its interest to the newest Virginia Pearson picture which William Fox has produced, "Bitter Truth" at the Rolfe tonight.

Anne, the part Miss Pearson portrays is an inhabitant of Blossom Street. Everyone who knows the filth and poverty of the slums will realize what that means. She is the typical girl of the East side, and she has her typical lover, Jimmy Graves, a crook. (Jack Hopkins.)

When Anne learns that the police are on Jimmy's trail, she hurries to warn him. But she is caught with him, both are imprisoned and the grain of bitterness is implanted in the girl's heart. She leaves the jail at the end of five years, firmly convinced that her mission in life is to have her revenge on Judge Marcus (William H. Tooker,) the man who sentenced her unjustly.

Anne Starts Her Work

The news that Marcus is about to be nominated for a higher position in public service spurs the girl on. She follows him wherever he goes. Finally, on board a Hudson river steamer, Anne jumps into the water and the judge, who is the only person nearby, leaps into the waters and rescues her.

In this way, the girl begins a friendship with the man on whom she wants to work vengeance.

This is where the story begins and leads from one event to another with interesting sequence.

TWENTY-EIGHT GERMAN SHIPS IN BRAZILIAN PORTS

In Event of War With U. S. They May Put to Sea and Raid American Commerce.

(By United Press)

Rio de Janeiro, Mar. 1.—(by mail)

There are twenty-eight German merchantmen interned in this and other Brazilian ports today which, rumor has it, would become raiders of American shipping in case of war between the United States and Germany. These ships total about 110,000 tons and are valued at $4,000,000. Half of them are in this port and the other scattered about Brazilian ports. With two exceptions all these ships are at liberty to put to sea at any time. Even since Brazil's protest to Germany over the submarine blockade, attention has been focused on the German ships by persistent stories that several of the interned steamers were waiting a favorable moment to make their escape.

Anchored in an open part of the bay (well under the surveillance of the harbor's forts and the Brazilian fleet, these fourteen ships form a listless and desolate group. Of the ships interned here the "Sierra Salvada" is the largest with 4,950 tons net register. The others are the "Edenberg" 2,780; "Cap Roca" 3,600; "Coburg" 4,200; "Gertrude Woermann" 3,969; "Arnold Ansinck" 2,896; "Etruria" 2,885; and the "Franklin" 3,223 tons. Besides these there were the "Muansa" 3,733 tons, which entered on August 19, 1914 but sailed a few days later for Buenos Aires and is at present interned in Chile, and the "Prussia" which entered August 20, sailed for Santos five days later and did not arrive at that port for a month in spite of the fact that it is but a days trip. An inquiry undertaken by port authorities for the purpose of finding the cause of this mysterious disappearance did not establish any definite results. It's an easy guess however that the "Prussia" did not risk capture by English cruisers on a mere pleasure trip and that some raider ship benefited in supplies during her disappearance. Another ship that broke the monotony of internment by venturing into the open was the "Edenberg" after twenty days of lying idle, sailed for Santos, where she never arrived. One month later the "Edenberg" returned calmly to Rio, dropped her anchor and landed the crew and passengers of the "Indian Prince" which had been sunk by the German cruiser "Kronprinz Wilhelm" which itself interned later in a north American port. For this adventure the "Edenberg" was ordered under guard by the Brazilian government. Outside of the "Prussia" and the "Edenberg" any of the interned German ships have the right to leave the harbor at will.

G. L. Steinman, of Eugene, is in the city.

G. C. Johnson, of McMinnville, is an Albany visitor.

Mrs. L. M. Lankford, of Salem, is registered at the Albany.

F. E. Bailey, of Peoria, spent the night in the city.

and Mrs. H. B. Cusick this morning motored to Portland in the Young car.

Mr. Young will ship his car from Portland to California where he will join his wife in a few days.
