ROPING AND BULL-DOGGING PHEASANTS NEW SPORT

John Burkhardt, a cattle raiser of near this city, has established a new record as a fancy roper. Saturday evening he was riding through his field looking over his stock when he saw a Ringneck pheasant sitting near by.

The thought occurred to him and Burkhardt swung his lariat at the prettily plumed pheasant cock. Just as the bird started to fly the rope caught on its wings and tightened. Burkhardt states that it was necessary for him to dismount from his horse and bulldog the pheasant. With the flopping of the bird, which frightened his horse and trying to handle both he had his hands full. Mr. Burkhardt is thinking of entering the Round-Up as an expert roper.

The skill displayed in this feat takes the bitterness off of an encounter he had with a yearling bull last week, when he nearly lost his life as a result of the antics of the young animal. The bull got him down and only luck saved him from terrific injuries.

The pheasant was turned over to the Democrat Saturday and this morning it was sent to the Ringneck Pheasant Farm.

Abolish Private Power Extravagance

Fuel and oil, salaries and machinery, repairs and depreciation, retail value of space, insurance, taxes, etc., are only a part of the extravagance of private power production.

They represent items constantly increasing in cost as prices of materials go higher and higher. All these charges with their uncertainty and worry and their disastrous effect on profits can be greatly reduced or entirely abolished.

By Using Central Station Power

Although the cost of all materials entering into the generating of power has doubled and trebled, Central Station power has NOT advanced in price.

Massed production of energy, under the direction of skilled engineers alert to every possible economy of operating expense, enables us to offer you Central Station Power—unlimited in quantity, unexcelled in quality—at rates that will effect substantial savings in your manufacturing costs.

We'll gladly send our expert to prove this statement if you'll telephone 15.
