LABOR LEADER OF COLORADO GOES BACK TO MINE

(By United Press)

Denver, April 12.—John R. Lawson, the labor leader who was convicted of murder in connection with the Ludlow massacre a while back, today gave up his place as a leader, donned overalls, fixed a miner's lamp to his cap, shouldered his tools and went down into a little mine in the Frederickburg district to earn his living once more digging coal.

Lawson came up from the ranks. He was a member of the international council of the United Mine Workers. He turned down a soft job with the union when his term expired the other day and went to work.

DON'T BE A DULL MAN.

And Don't Have to Say "I Didn't Think," or "I Didn't Realize."

"The dull man is a bad man," says Arnold Bennett in the Woman's Home Companion. "You may say that the dull man sins by want of thought rather than with intention, unconsciously rather than consciously. Perhaps, but that does not lessen the evil he causes. If I get out of an automobile and carelessly bang the door of it behind me and catch your finger in the door you having remained in the car and leave it caught there your agony won't be less acute because I, through not looking behind me either before or after I banged the door, am unaware of it. Nor will your resentment against me be any the less either."

"Simply to say 'I never realized' is not an entirely satisfactory excuse. People ought to realize. The habit of not realizing grows faster than almost any other habit, and it is very comfortable, and it saves a lot of trouble to oneself. But it is to be condemned."

"Yet if a man is absolutely dull, if he is utterly without imagination, how can he realize, how can he put himself in the other man's place? Is he not to be pitied instead of anathematized?"

"As to that, I will tell you something: There is no such person as the absolutely dull man, the man absolutely without imagination. Everybody has some gift of imagination; everybody can succeed in putting himself, to a certain extent, in the other man's place. And few people, if any, perform this feat as often or as completely as they might do."

OUR SENSE OF MOTION.

And an Explanation of Some Railway Train Delusions.

When you sit in a moving train looking out of the window it appears as though the fields, the telegraph poles and everything else outside were moving instead of you. This is because our only ideas of motion are arrived at by comparison. The fact that neither you nor the seats of the car nor any other part of the inside of the car is changing its position leads you to the delusion that the things outside the car are moving.

If you were to pull down all the curtains and the train were making no noise at all you would not think that anything was moving, says the Book of Wonders. It would appear as though you were motionless just as everything in the car appears so. When you turn then to the window and lift the curtain you carry in the back of your mind the idea of being at rest, and that is what makes it appear as though the fields and everything outside were moving in an opposite direction.

This is particularly noticeable when you are in a train in a station, with another train on the next track. There is a sense of motion if one of the trains only is moving, and you feel that it is the other train, because you are surrounded by objects in the car which are at rest. If the delusion happens to be turned the other way it will appear as though you are moving and the other is still.

Just Had to Find It.

The average foreigner can rarely comprehend the geographical area of the United States, as was quite fully illustrated by the Englishman and his valet who had been traveling due west from Boston for five days. At the end of the fifth day master and servant were seated in the smoking car, and it was observed that the man was gazing steadily and thoughtfully out of the window. Finally his companion became curious "William," said he, "of what are you thinking?"

"I was just thinking, sir, about the discovery of America," replied the valet. "Columbus didn't do such a wonderful thing, after all, when he found this country, did he, now, sir? Hafter hall's said an' done, 'ow could 'e 'elp it?—Everybody's."

Pulling an Elephant's Tooth.

Perhaps the greatest dental operation on record was performed some years ago upon an elephant in the City of Mexico. The aching tooth was twelve inches long and measured fourteen inches round the root. After the animal had been securely fastened with chains his mouth was pried open and a quantity of cocaine applied to deaden the pain. When this was done a hole was bored through the tooth and an iron bar inserted. Then a rope was twisted around the bar, and four horses were attached thereto to drag the offending molar out.—London Tit Bits.

Humpback Salmon.

During a humpback salmon year the Indians journey for miles to the streams where the species spawn and there maintain camps for weeks to dry and smoke the succulent fish. So important do they regard this fish that they date time by them, calling the humpback salmon year "hadasaque," after their name for the species. During "off" years the Indians content themselves with dog salmon and silverfish from necessity.—New York Sun

John Adams Objected.

John Adams while president in Philadelphia refused to approve the celebration of Washington's birthday on the ground, as he afterward said, that it was a slight upon the highest official of the land to honor thus a private citizen.

COUSINS OF THE CRAB.

The Little Bugs You Often Find Under a Decayed Log.

Every one has seen the curious little flat gray creatures that scurry out of sight when you lift a decayed log or a moss covered stone in the woods or near the water. They are the armadillidia, or isopods of the genus armadillidia, commonly called the armadillo, sow bug and pill bug.

They are really not bugs at all, but crustaceans or distant relatives of the crab, with gills provided with air tubes not unlike the air tubes through which insects breathe all over their body. A favorite food of frogs, toads and salamanders, the pill bug itself subsists largely on decaying vegetable matter, and some believe it to be a useful scavenger.

According to the Zoological Society Bulletin, the name armadillo was given it because of its habit when disturbed of rolling itself up into a ball, as the mammal of South America does, but the crustacean is shrewder than the mammal, for, whereas the armadillo never uncoils when it is caught or frightened—and therefore its shell often serves as its own rousing pan in the ovens of equatorial countries—the pill bug after rolling itself up once or twice and discovering that it is still in the presence of danger will give up the useless stratagem and try to make off unnoticed.

GOT A FURTHER REWARD.

Von Suppe, His Opera "Fatinizza" and His Lavish Publishers.

Franz von Suppe, famous as an operetta composer, whose "Fatinizza" is perhaps best known of all his works, fared badly in the financial disposal of it.

Kranz, then a Vienna publisher, purchased the piece before it had been produced, paying Von Suppe the equivalent of $150. The success of the work was enormous. The famous old "Fatinizza" march is still a not unfamiliar number in the variety houses. It earned thousands, undoubtedly hundreds of thousands, of guineas for the publishers.

When it had gone quite a way upon its career Von Suppe wrote a polite letter to the publishers suggesting that, in view of the very small sum originally paid him and the amount which the opera had earned for them, they might think that some further reward was not undeserved by him.

In a few days Von Suppe received an equally polite letter from the publishers thanking him for his letter, stating that they quite agreed with his standpoint and further saying that the broker brought with him a box of twenty-five choice cigars which the firm hoped Von Suppe would accept with their best compliments.—Argonaut.

Selecting Your Broker.

In the Woman's Home Companion Harold Howland has an article entitled "The Woman Who Wants to Invest," in which he says: "A good broker is as valuable to the intending investor as a good doctor to the presumably unattended invalid. The broker knows the business. He is steeped in the facts of the world of finance. His judgment is trained by study and experience and observation. His advice is worth having."

"But be sure he is a good broker. There are charlatans and confidence men even among stockbrokers, though the proportion is not nearly so high as the novelists of 'high finance' would have us believe. Be as careful in picking out your broker as in selecting your lawyer or your doctor. Your chance of getting a good one if you are equally careful is quite as good."

She Told Him.

An Indianapolis wife took one of her children to a throat specialist. The specialist looked into the juvenile throat. "Tonsils poorly taken out," he declared crisply. "Have to be done over again."

Then followed a brief explanation of the reason why the offending tonsils should be attended to again. "Who did this work?" asked the doctor, his face assuming a keenly professional air as though he must know who had been thus derelict in his profession. "You did," said the mother, with a smile. And the doctor smiled too.—Indianapolis News.

New Light on an Old Subject.

Some of the engravings found by Forest Ranger Sullivan in recently uncovered ruins of New Mexico and Arizona are said to lead a strong support to the claim of Chinese Chronicler Hui Sen, who lived in the sixth century, that North America was known to the Chinese under the name of Fusang or Fusa. It was said to be a continent lying 6,500 miles to the east of Asia. He said that five Buddhist priests sailed from China to Fusa, landing in what is now Mexico, where they taught their religion to the natives and built temples.

Well Defined.

The class in spelling was asked to state the difference between "results" and "consequences." One bright eyed little miss replied. "Results are what you expect and consequences are what you get."—Country Gentleman.

Philadelphia.

Before the city of Philadelphia received its present name the site was known to the Indians by the name "Conquannock," which to them meant "the grove of tall pines."

Farmers are becoming restless over the continued boisterous weather which is causing a delay in farm work. The young grain now begins to look quite green and is making quite a vigorous growth, but it still looks very small for this time of the year. Farmers succeeded in getting most of their plowing done during the fine weather in February which a few dry days would be in condition for seeding.

Fruit trees of all kinds are very slow about leafing out, which looks like early cherries and berries will be scarce for a while yet. All kinds of stock still have to be fed and feed is growing scarce which will mark a hardship with many farmers if the weather does not clear up soon.
