

PORTLAND WEEKLY STOCK MARKET REPORT

PATRIOTISM AND PROFIT

General farmers and live stock producers can do their country no greater service than by seeking to make their production reach the very limit of possibility.

Men who send to market immature and young stock that could carry greater weight are wasting the country's resources. In all human probability they are also sacrificing profits they might reap. The unprecedented prices have been and are a temptation to cash in while the cashing is good; but when a man sends to market underweight and young breeding stock he is killing the goose that lays the golden egg. He is making it harder for himself and others to replenish mead lots and pastures.

To be sure, no man can be expected to go out and buy dear feed to make 1600 and 1700 pound steers or 350 to 400 pound lard hogs, but it is little less than an economic crime at this time to send in half finished 1,000 to 1200 pound and 150 to 180 pound hogs.

Marketing of strictly dairy veal calves is excusable, but every calf that could grow into good beef should be all means kept.

Sending to slaughter pregnant cows and heifers for beef should be absolutely discontinued, at least for the period of the war.

In our great national emergency every man should consider how best he can help along. The easiest way for every owner of live stock to "do his bit" is to see that every animal goes to market carrying as much weight as it is practical to put on.

We are now drawing upon the May and June and July supplies of beef, pork and mutton.

Farming and livestock feeding is a good deal of a gamble, but there never was a time since the American Civil War when a feeder could feel as sure of good profit on bringing his livestock up to normal weight.

The higher the prices for grain, the more certain is the feeder of a profit in putting weight on immature stock.

From one end of the country to the other there is a dearth of mature stock. Feed lots, East, West, North and South, are bare. Hundreds of thousands of sheep and cattle have been wiped out by the almost unprecedented severity of winter in the West, and there is no spot on the map where one can turn to find a surplus of young stock to put in feed lots or turn on the pasture.

Patriotism alone ought to be sufficient spur to induce farmers and feeders to mature their holdings. At this time it seems highly probable that such a course would not only be highly patriotic, but handsomely profitable.—Chicago Live Stock World.

Shedd Men Patriotic

The following young men of Shedd, and vicinity, have enlisted under the stars and stripes to serve Uncle Sam: P. S. Bukowski, Loren Stone, Glen Gregory, Walter Couey, Wm. Schuman, Floyd Bryant, Mack Powers, Otto McClane, Kenneth McCune, Geo. McBride.—Shedd Monitor.

FOREST FIRES.

There Are Three Kinds, of Which the "Crown" Fire is the Worst.

There are three kinds of forest fire—the "surface fire," which merely runs in the leaves and ground litter; the "ground fire," that covers the underbrush of the dense forests, and the "crown fire," the most dangerous and terrifying of all. A crown fire is usually caused when the ground or surface fire reaches the top of a ridge or knoll, and the increased draft carries the blaze up the trunks of the trees to the tops of the "crowns." It is the crown fires which have made the great forest fires of history.

Surrounding the burning area by a trench from which everything down to the mineral soil has been removed is the only kind of fire line which will stop a ground fire, and it will often stop a surface fire. For surface fire "whipping" or using brush branches or water soaked sacking to whip the burning leaves at the edge of the fire back into the burned area is most effective. Hand as well as water is valuable in fighting this kind of fire too.

There is only one way to fight a crown fire—that is, by "backfiring"—fighting fire with fire. This method is extremely dangerous, consisting of setting a counter fire far enough from the main body of the original fire so that all inflammable material will be burned by the time the fire reaches that point, and the fire will die from lack of material to feed on. The backfire is set far enough from the main fire to escape the draft which is fanning the blaze.—New York Times.

Trees Upside Down.

By transplanting young trees upside down so that the branches develop roots and the roots leaves an English railway has produced small shade trees in less time than ordinarily.

THEY WERE ALL INSANE.

Even the Expert Witness Himself Must Have Seen Pretty Mad.

Dr. Allen McLane Hamilton, in his "Recollections of an Alienist," relates the following incident which occurred in an Italian murder trial in which he appeared for the state:

The defense was based on the shape of the murderer's head, and much testimony had been given by an anthropologist and craniologist in regard to the shortness of the head of the man on trial.

So improbable was the testimony of the head "expert" that Dr. Hamilton, during the noon recess, went to a hotel and secured several conformateur tracings, which he gave to the district attorney.

"Doctor, extreme length of the head is also a stigma of insanity, is it not?" asked the district attorney.

The quack assented. The district attorney showed him the tracings and asked his opinion of them. The fellow examined them and declared that the persons from whom they were taken were undoubtedly insane.

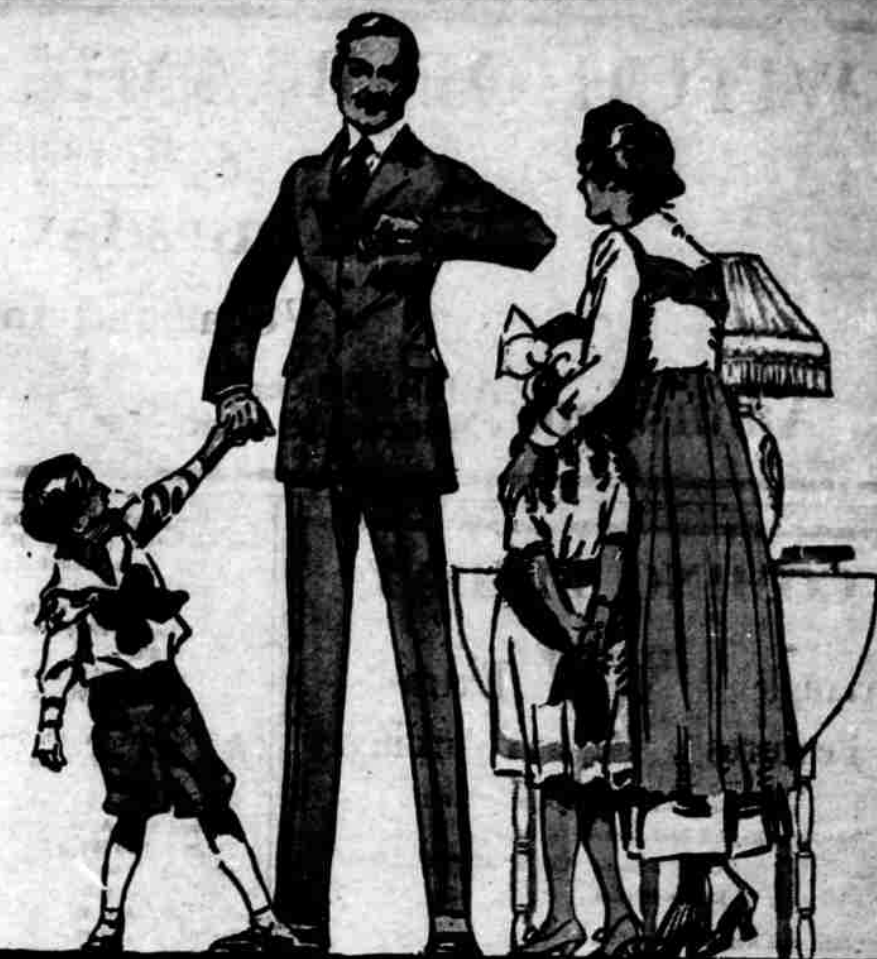

"Well," said his merciless cross-examiner, "would it surprise you to know that the first series were taken from the head of William H. Vanderbilt and his sons and that the last is from the head of his honor the judge who presides in this case?"

It goes without saying that the witness' "expert" testimony was promptly ruled out.

Choice of Evils.

"Old man, you are entirely too close in money matters. Your friends are beginning to classify you as a tightwad."

"What does it matter? I'd rather be classified as a tightwad than as a good thing."—Kansas City Journal.

The best-looking man in town

YOUR'RE probably that to somebody: your admirers may be only those of your own household; but they're loyal; there's no doubt in their minds about it.

It isn't a matter of clothes, altogether; but clothes help keep up the impression; and that's where we come in with fine suits and overcoats. If you'll take care of your part of it you can safely leave the question of clothes to us.

Good fit, good style, good all-wool quality, good tailoring; the sort of clothes that help make a man as good looking as nature intended him to look. You can see the label in these goods as a guarantee of good faith on the part of the makers. We'll show it to you; as they say, "It's a small thing to look for, a big thing to find."

COAST WON'T GET FIRST SHIPPING CONTRACTS

Portland, April 18.—It is not likely that Pacific Coast shipbuilders will be given the opportunity to build any of the first batch of submarine chasers, although shipbuilders are still making an effort to land some of the contracts, according to word received here from Washington.

"The Navy Department recognizes Douglas Fir as a suitable material for hull construction, but owing to the small size of the vessels planned, the impossibility of shipping them overland and the small cruising radius they possess, it has been deemed advisable to build at least the first batch on the Atlantic coast," reads a message received here from the Navy Department.

Baker, April 18.—Everybody in Baker will leave the stores, mills, homes and offices April 24 and give the town its annual scouring.

MILITARY TRAINING IN EUGENE HIGH SCHOOL

The following is reprinted from the Eugene Guard:

Military training for students who desire to take it will be offered by the Eugene high school beginning some time this week or next, as soon as the students can be organized. A member of the faculty will have charge of the drill.

A large number of high school students have signified interest in military drill. Some have joined the local militia and others have departed for regular service. It is thought that several companies will be formed from the students.

No equipment is available at present for drill. Formations will be rudimentary this spring.
