ATHLETIC TRAINING WILL HELP UNCLE SAM

New York, April 19.—(By United Press)—War is going to take an awful wallop at athletic sports in the United States, but at the same time it is going to be the means of demonstrating the wonderful efficiency in sports that has been attained in this country.

The baseball player, the track athlete, the boxer, the trapshooter, all undoubtedly will be seen in action, and they all have been given training that will make them valuable.

Baseball training, it has many times been pointed out, is admirable for training men in the use of grenades and bombs. There isn't another nation in the world where baseball is played as it is played in this country. Consequently there isn't a country where the knack of accurate throwing is developed.

There is the trapshooter who turns in his 50 broken birds out of 50 shot, and plenty of them that pull down 90-some out of 100. It isn't all mere speculation to figure that he could do as well in a trench with a machine gun to guide or with a rifle glued to his shoulder.

Fine condition, health and no nerves belong to this class of men. They are splendid specimens of Americans, nearly every one of them. A brigade of them could be fit for war duty probably in half the time it would take to prepare as many ordinary men.

They'll be ready when the time comes. Expressions of willingness to serve have been heard from the ranks of every branch of sport. Jess Willard's offer of service probably could be turned into an unprecedented stimulus for recruiting. Doubtless if he attempted it, he could organize that full brigade with very little trouble. Such an idol as he would be an attraction for every young athlete in the country.

If Willard's offer could be followed by every big star in all branches of sport it would mean a great deal to the government's preparations to help crush the Kaiser. They probably will be coming in.

THUMBNAILED SKETCHES OF THE MEN WHO RUN UNCLE SAM'S BIG NAVY

Washington, April 18.—The United States Navy was the pioneer of all the navies of the world in adopting the electric drive for battleships. Now electric propulsion is universal. A few years will see the last of the old coal driven dreadnought.

The change is considered the most revolutionary of all modern naval development.

The man who accomplished it is Admiral Robert S. Griffin, Engineer in Chief of the U. S. Navy.

He is an expert of experts in anything pertaining to marine construction and is one of the veterans of the bureau he now commands.

The mechanical equipment of the great chain of radio stations which now link the United States with the Orient has been largely under the direction of Admiral Griffin. Through the trans-Pacific leap the Secretary of the Navy at his desk in Washington can communicate instantly with his commander of the Asiatic fleet, wherever it may happen to be.

The navy expects to use much more of Admiral Griffin's mechanical genius.
