GERMAN LOYALTY.
An expression of patriotism by Frederick L. Hoffman, statistician of the Prudential and a native of Germany, published recently in a New York daily, has attracted much attention.

The loyalty of Americans of German birth includes the duty, however trying of active resistance against any and every foe of the American republic, including the government of their native country, specifically and unconditionally renounced in the solemn obligation to protect and preserve the government of the United States.

In all the world there is no flag more inspiring than the Stars and Stripes; the fairest symbol of unstained honor, after more than a century of national life and international relations.
