HIPPODROME SERIES ENDS WITH PLEASING PROGRAM

Last night's Hippodrome bill at the Globe Theatre was a fitting one for the close of a splendid season of vaudeville as given by the Harris and Armstrong Tour B circuit. Every act was of a high order, but special praise must be given Lou Yoke, the Chinese boy, who appeared in beautiful Mandarin costumes and other feminine Oriental costumes and sang in the sweet voice of a woman. And then—in the last line of his last song he came down to his natural baritone, removed his wig and left a bewildered audience wondering how he did it.

The Misses La Varde, the Musical Blue Birds, gave a fine singing and dancing act, and closed with a saxophone and vocal duet that captured the audience. Alfredo and De Fay, the two Hicks from Hickville, were also good, and Miss De Fay scored in regular Rose Melville style with her Sis Hopkins make-up and impersonations. It was a fine bill throughout and left the audience in anticipation of next year's tour.
