MODERN INDUSTRY

The Immense Debt It Owes to the Science of Chemistry.

A VITAL FORCE IN BUSINESS.

It is an Exceptional Process or Manufacturing Plant in These Days That Does Not Rest Fundamentally Upon Chemical Control.

His gentlemen gathered round a table on which were displayed a steel rail, a waterproof shoe, a fifty cent necktie and a tin of preserved beef. Each claimed credit for creating these commodities.

"All are products of our wonderful factory system," said the manufacturer. "My forerunner built the factory, and my management keeps it going."

"How about money?" protested the banker. "Where would your factory be without my financial aid?"

The third man was an engineer. "Neither factory nor finance would have been of much account without my professional ability in working out processes," he asserted. "Each of these articles embodies hundreds of engineering problems which I have solved."

"All production rests on labor," declared a workman in cap and overalls. "If I walk out of your factory everything stops."

"I built up the consuming demand for your stuff," clipped in the salesman.

Finally the sixth man spoke. "I am a chemist," he said, "and these are all chemical products. All industry today is three-fourths chemical. You may think that your steel rail was made in furnaces and mills by purely mechanical processes, but from start to finish it depends on chemical exactness in materials and manipulation, and if the chemistry is lacking the rail breaks. That chrome plated shoe is a chemical achievement. Chrome tanning is a chemically exact process. The necktie is made of artificial silk, a chemical imitation that is at once cheap, good looking and useful. As for your can of beef, the packing industry has been built up on chemical research, and this meat was probably paid for with chemical by-products. Gentlemen, three-fourths of all our manufacturing today is chemical at bottom, and you must recognize that fact if you are going to extend your business and continue to make money."

Enter a vital new factor in American industry—chemical control.

Look at our manufacturing plants through the eyes of the chemist and products that you had supposed were entirely mechanical in their nature, such as building materials, metals, machinery, and the like, become products of the laboratory. The food you eat, the beverages you drink, the clothes you wear, the tools you use, your playthings and studies and the power, heat and light that keep you comfortable in the modern world—in every one of them is subtle chemical supervision. It is an exceptional process or plant nowadays that does not rest fundamentally on chemical control, and if you find one that does not something is probably the matter with it for that very reason.

Here is another way of illustrating chemical control:

Everybody knows that much has been accomplished in the past few years by intelligent study of people in industry—the workers. A manager understands that his people have differences of temperament, education, brains, strength, likes and dislikes. He uses their natural abilities as far as possible and, when these are too pronounced in a certain direction, may check one against another, as by harnessing careless energy and cautious experience together. Even differences of nationality, politics and religion can be harmonized to increase output, raise earnings, cut costs and abolish waste and accidents.

Now comes the chemist and insists that the materials of industry are just about like the people. They are temperamental. They have warm likes and dislikes for each other. Some are energetic and some sluggish. They differ with mass, temperature, time, and so on. Their differences are as subtle as human whimsies, being detected only with the microscope or delicate reactions in many cases. The chemist aims to bring about with materials the same balance and working harmony that the manager of employees brings about with human beings.

We must all get acquainted with each other on this new basis, says the chemist. Bankers and business men must get the chemical viewpoint and learn to pass on chemical values. They now call in the engineer for professional guidance when they make investments and start new enterprises. They must learn to call in the chemist in the same way and use his knowledge in clearing up technical problems. Their relation with the engineer was not established in a day.

A similar relation with the chemist will take time. For the present they should cultivate an acquaintance with chemist and chemical literature.

The chemist, on his part, recognizes that he has been too closely absorbed in his profession and that he must now cultivate the acquaintance of the bank

BIG TIME COMING FOR KIDS FROM 6 TO 60

Wild Animals From the Orient to the Occident, Educated to Do Stunts.

Hello, Kids! Here we are again. Who are we? Why, we're the Al

G. Barnes Big Wild Animal Circus and we are not only inclined to give everybody a good time but we are going to do it.

When you open your eyes on May 10, there will be acres of canvas covering the show grounds sheltering over 1,000 wild and domestic animals, whose marvelous performances will rival the highest flights of fancy.

If you are a boy you will revel in your day dreams as to what you would do if you were in darkest Africa or the jungles of Nyanza and confronted by beasts of fierce mein Gulliver of old, would strive for a mid voracious appetites. You, like tail hold, give him the giant swing and snap his "derrn" head off, scalp the "critter" and bring your trophy home to be admired by Betsy Ann or Lucy Jane, as the case may be Recieve a proud pat from an indulgent father, and an extra hug from mother, who always knew her boy would be a hero.

If you are Betsy Ann, or Lucy Jane, like all other girls, you will other up your spinal column, when you look into the cold, cruel, basilisk eyes of fierce lions, tigers, leopards, pumas, bears, and other wild beasts in the Al. G. Barnes aggregation of "tames" arstwhile wild animals, as a matted of fact, kiddlets, this is some show. Yes, we can further say, it is the only exclusive-lyeducated animal show on earth and the Democrat is more than anxious that every boy and girl of school age should witness this highly educational exhibition of the power men and women over beasts that a feared in the darkland of uncivilized countries. While this is an animal exhibit, yet it is object lesson of what every boy and girl can do in overcoming obstacles and obstructions in carrying out their successes in the face of what might be thought by some to be insurmountable obstacles. The human feature of this wonderful show is one that will make a lasting impression for good upon the mind and character of every boy and girl privileged to witness this marvel of the twentieth century and exposition of loving patience and stick-to-it-iveness.

The Democrat has made arrangements with the Al G. Barnes circus, so every boy and girl, fifteen years of age or under, in Albany or vicinity may see the circus FREE. Watch tomorrow's Democrat for particulars.

Quite Fatal.

A Newark firm doing a big business in accident insurance received this note from one of its clients a few days ago: "I received a fatal accident to my hand. Have been looking for you to adjust damages. Please come soon. I don't want it to be till you have seen it, and it is quite a job to keep it bound up. So please attend to it promptly before it gets well."—Newark Call.
