SENATOR M. A. MILLER SPOKE AT TANGENT YESTERDAY

"Our National Crisis" was the subject of an address delivered at Tangent last night by Senator M. A. Miller. The address was delivered in the Southern Methodist church and a large crowd turned out to listen to the speaker.

Mr. Miller is one of the best-known speakers in this section of the state and always draws a large crowd.

THE FOOD PROBLEM.

One Way to Meet It is Through Simple Habits and Meatless Days.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley told the Economic club of New York that if he could get the laboring men to listen to him he could double their wages for them by telling them what to eat. He cited his own boys, two and four years of age, as "more cheaply fed and better fed than any other two boys in the United States." Whole wheat and milk are the principal features of their diet.

The twenty-five cent a day diet demonstration with thirteen New York policemen was an unqualified success. Nearly all gained in weight, and all enjoyed their meals during the entire three weeks. This is not an altogether remarkable achievement, for many a workman's family of six members is compelled to spend less than $1.50 a day on the table. The chief value of the demonstration was the well balanced diet that was provided, a feature that does not usually characterize the meals of those who are compelled to live cheaply.

What we need to offset the high prices are education in the fundamentals of nutrition and a revival of the simple habits that prevailed a generation or two ago. We are the biggest meat eating nation in the world. If the meat supply continues to decrease while the population increases we shall have to change our habits. Government reports show a decline of 10,000,000 in the number of cattle other than milk cows and of 5,000,000 in the number of sheep in the last ten years, while the population increased 15,000,000. The American family should inaugurate meatless days.—Leslie's.

KEEP YOUR HANDS CLEAN.

Wash Them Many Times a Day and Use Plenty of Soap.

Soup or lather such as is used in shaving kills minute organisms of disease. Whenever a person's hands have touched anything unclean or a sore the hands should be instantly washed with soap and water, making a good lather.

All day long we are brought in contact with what is unclean. The street car strap, the doorknob—anything and everything touched by any one else may hold the tiny organisms of a deadly disease.

Your unclean infected hands may cause the loss of your eyesight. The practice of rubbing the eyes with the fingers or hands endangers the sight. Typhoid fever and other serious diseases are carried from person to person through the medium of food which has been touched and prepared by unwashed hands. Washing the hands with plenty of soap and water always before cutting bread or cake or touching other foods would save hundreds of persons from illness and death every year.

One may feel almost sure that one's hands are clean all the time—they look as if they were—but science tells us they are not chemically clean and incapable of doing harm unless they are washed with soap or a disinfectant. So to be sure of doing no injury to yourself or any one else wash your hands with soap or a disinfectant before touching food or using them to brush dust from your eyes.—Philadelphia Record.

A Pathetic Benefit.

Perhaps one of the saddest of the many benefits which have been celebrated at Drury Lane was that given on June 7, 1828, for Grinnald, the greatest clown the stage has known, when the heartbroken old man was wheeled on to the stage in an arm chair and hopelessly broke down in his endeavor to sing his once famous ditty, "Hot Codlins."

The old man's memory had completely forsaken him. On that occasion a sum of £1,700 was realized, which for many years remained a record.—St. James' Gazette.

Pure Reason.

In his essay "Perpetual Peace," published in 1795, Immanuel Kant declared that we can never have universal peace until the world is politically organized, and it will never be possible to organize the world politically until the people, not the kings, rule. And he added that the peoples of the earth must cultivate and attain the spirit of hospitality and good will toward all races and nations.—Independent.

Of Course It Can't Be Done.

Of course well informed people know better, but there are some ignorant folks who think it is possible to have a good time without spending more than they can afford.—Claude Allen in Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Never Finished.

He (anxiously)—About how long, darling, will it take to complete your trunk? She—All the rest of my married life.—Exchange.

HISTORIC BAGDAD.

In Ancient Times It Was the Finest City in the World.

Bagdad is known in ancient history as the capital of the mighty Saracen empire, over which the descendants of King Nebuchadnezzar ruled for many centuries. The population of Bagdad is uncertain, but the best authorities estimate it at about 150,000.

The bulk of the people are of Arab blood, but there are thousands of Jews and a large admixture of other races, especially Persians. The Turks are comparatively few and are mostly government officials.

The entire city is surrounded by a brick wall five miles in circumference and forty feet high, but in some places broken down, and by a deep, dark ditch.

The houses of Bagdad have, in general, no windows toward the front and are built of old yellowish red brick, which has been known to become red hot during the heat of the day. The interiors of the houses are gorgeously decorated with vaulted ceilings, rich moldings, inlaid mirrors and massive gildings.

The domes and minarets, of which there are no fewer than 2,000, the earliest dating from the twelfth century, are ornamented with glazed tiles and paintings in green and white and are considered to be the finest in the world.

When Bagdad was the home of the caliphate in the eighth century it was the finest city in the world, possessing a population of over 2,000,000.—Pearson's Weekly.

Transval Terminations.

In perusing the names of South African towns in the newspapers many must have noted the word "fontein," which appears so often. This word is the English "fountain," and towns with this termination have been named after Dutch farms, which are always built beside fountains of spring water.

Thus Bloemfontein means "flowery fountain," Molderfontein "muddy fountain," Kleinfontein "small fountain" and Elandfontein "deer fountain."

Another town termination which many readers must have noticed is that of "laager," which is pronounced "laughty." It means "shelter for animals," and hence when we talk of the battle of Elandlaage we may know that it was fought on a spot frequented by deer.—London Mail.

Not Always.

"And now, boys," concluded the eminent visitor to the school, "never be in too great a hurry. More haste, less speed. Remember the hare and the tortoise. Let 'slow, but sure,' be your motto. Then you can't go wrong. Be slow and you will be sure."

"Not always, sir," piped a young urchin.

"Not always? How do you make that out?"

"There's lots of things that's slow, but they ain't sure."

"Oh! Name one, then."

"Please, sir, a watch."—Exchange.

Food Value of Milk.

Milk is an animal food. In nature its use is universal as food for the growing young. This means that milk makes growth, does more than merely maintain the body. Milk possesses the element of growth not only in the butter fat, but also in the skim milk. There is no better food than milk.—Exchange.

The Service That Counts

That's the whole secret of the success of any modern store, but it applies more to a Shoe Store than to any other line of business because your Shoes must be accurately fitted in order to render you perfect service.

Your purchase of a pair of Shoes from us isn't of first importance—and we want you to know that it isn't.

The all-important thing is the amount of attention and service you receive while being fitted with the proper pair of Shoes.

Your one purchase won't make us successful, but by reordering continued service that meets with your approval you'll come in again and possibly bring other customers with you. That is what we are building on to reach the goal of success.
