NOT YET A MELTING POT.
It Will Take This Country Centuries to Blend Its Varied Races.

Through an extensive study of members of some of the oldest American families America as the "melting pot of the nations" proves to be but a convenient expression for writers and orators—merely a picture drawn by those who do not trouble themselves about the precision of their figures of speech, a myth without foundation of fact.

For four years Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, a curator of the division of physical anthropology of the United States National museum, has had under way an investigation of the blending of the various types of humanity in America, which, though not yet fully completed, has resulted in the inevitable conclusion that the force of heredity is too strong to be radically altered in a century or two and that we must wait centuries longer to find a type which will justify the statement that America is in reality a "melting pot" of the nations. Dr. Hrdlicka finds that even the first material that went into the "pot" has not melted yet.

Several hundred members of the old white American stock have been measured most carefully and examined in many ways to find if the people making up this stock are tending to become alike—if a new subtype of the human race is being formed here in America with intermarriage, environment and under the pressure of outward circumstances. Dr. Hrdlicka finds definitely that as yet such is not the case. His investigation shows that the descendants of the pilgrim fathers, the Virginia cavaliers, the Pennsylvania Dutch and the Huguenots, while possibly not as much unlike as their ancestors probably were, are still far from a real blend.—Philadelphia Record.

BELOW THE MOUNTAINS.
The Higher the Elevation the Lighter the Material Under It.

Researched of the United States coast and geodetic survey carried on in recent years prove beyond doubt that mountains are not held up by the rigidity or strength of the earth's materials, but by the fact that the materials under them (in the outer portion of the earth) are lighter than normal.

The higher the mountain or the plateau the lighter is the material under it. The principle is exactly the same as that which makes an iceberg float. The portion of the iceberg that is above water is held up by the large mass of ice—which has a density lower than that of water—in the submerged portion of the berg.

So, in the case of the mountain, the portion above the general level is held up by the lighter material under the mountain, which extends down to a depth of about sixty miles. Although the mountain is held up or floated by a lighter material under it, the bottom of the ocean is depressed because the material under it to a depth of about sixty miles below sea level is heavier than normal.

What may be considered as the normal condition is that which obtains in the large river valleys and under the coastal plains.

Swiss Military System.
With a population of less than 5,000,000 Switzerland can put in the field an army of 500,000. How does the Alpine republic do it?

In the first place, every able-bodied male citizen serves. Those not able-bodied pay a military tax, graduated according to income, and there is no buying immunity from service. Training begins early, schoolboys from seven to fifteen years old spending from four to eight hours a week in compulsory gymnastic drill and physical training without arms. In the summer comes work in the cadet corps, 100 to 200 hours, where marching, map reading, etc., are taught and also target practice with the rifle. The rifle used is a miniature of the regular army weapon.—Outing.

The Ham the Germans attacked was not the kind they would prefer just now.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.
