America's warlike attitude is so unexpected to Germany that her naval officers disabled her steamships in America barely two months in advance of possible hostilities.—Philadelphia North American.

THE GREATEST SOLDIER

By Hapsburg Liebe of the Vigilantes
During the first days of that most lamentable conflict that we now know as the Civil War, a little woman down in South Carolina gave her husband and their four grown sons to fight for the Cause that to her seemed just. She was not belligerent; she was brave. A few years later a neighbor brought her word that all but the youngest boy had been killed. "You shouldn't have sent them all," said this neighbor. "You should have kept two of the boys at home."

"If I had a dozen to send, I would have sent them," the little woman replied very readily, very calmly. "And I know that my men went down in their boots, doing distinguished service. You see, I know my men."

At the end of the war, the youngest boy returned; he was a captain, and not a captain through courtesy. As he rode through the old plantation, he saw to his intense surprise that it was in a fair state of cultivation, and that foodstuffs had taken the place of cotton; he had expected to find those broad acres filled with weeds and briars. As soon as he had proudly greeted his mother and been in turn proudly greeted by her, he spoke of this.

"That was my part," she told him. "You couldn't fight without something to eat could you?"

It was then that he noted the marks of toil on her hands, and he knew that the faithful old negroes had not done all the hard work. He brought his heels together in the military fashion, and lifted his hand to the brim of his hat.

"Mother," he said, not very steadily, "I salute you, the greatest soldier of us all."

Motored to Albany—
